English campus may reopen this fall

BIG SANDY — There is a "60 to 70 percent" chance that Ambassador College at Bricklet Wood, England, will be reopened this fall, said Garner Ted Armstrong in a surprise announcement in his "Personal" for this issue of The Worldwide News. He said he wanted to take the brethren into his confidence "at the earliest planning stages," but he said the decision was not definite.

Mr. Armstrong is presently studying the feasibility of reopening the Bricklet Wood campus "with a streamlined curriculum aimed primarily at developing the ministry and leaders who would go into the International Division." He asked the Business Office in Pasadena to conduct a thorough study of the financial feasibility of the campus' reopening.

"Meanwhile, I am conducting far-reaching meetings with many of our leading ministers concerning the necessary personnel changes which would be required, selection of faculty, and all of the dozens of related subjects which would need thorough discussion prior to reopening the Bricklet Wood campus," Mr. Armstrong said.

120 Students

Mr. Armstrong said he was proposing the college reopen with "around 120 students" rather than "the full complement of 250" students, which was the previous enrollment.

(Other details of the campus' potential reopening are in Mr. Armstrong's "Personal," beginning on this page, which is devoted entirely to the subject.)

Leslie McCullough, director of the International Division, said, "The possibility of reopening the campus is great, and all kinds of things can come out of the decision."

Leon Walker, chairman of the Theology Department in Big Sandy and former dean of students in England, said he was "thrilled pink to see it open again. I think there's a lot to be said for a small, intimate campus of that nature where everybody knows everybody. I would be very thrilled if it would open again."

Dr. David Wainwright, who was dean of faculty in Bricklet Wood when the college closed and currently on vacation here, said:

"One tends to think the International Division will increase in responsibility and will need a lot more manpower. With the smaller setup in Bricklet Wood, it is ideal for specialized training."

Dr. Wainwright, who has a B.A. and an M.A. from Oxford University in England, said the "theological section in the library is good and would need very little tooling up if we have a ministerial-training program."

23 Nationalities

He said the college there had 35 countries represented in the student body, with 23 nationalities present at one time. He feels the campus is also "useful from the proximity point of view." He said students can go to Europe during school breaks to work in the Duesseeldorf or Geneva offices and come back to campus with better perspectives.

Ian Hufton, 1975 Big Sandy graduate who was slated to be Bricklet Wood student-body president the year the college closed, thinks the announcement is a "fabulous" development.

"It is great for the British Work, international students and many students who attend there for the European flavor. With the empathy I have for the British people, I feel there is a real need for Ambassador graduates to fill the manpower needs there as well as the needs of the Work in Europe."

He said the announcement is "really explosive," comparable to the time when it was announced the campus was closing in Bricklet Wood. (See ENGLISH CAMPUS, page 7)

A Personal Letter

from

Garner Ted Armstrong

Dear brethren in Christ:

Greetings! I have SENSATIONAL NEWS I want to share with you.

I have been having top-level conferences with several of our leading evangelists and other ministers concerning a wonderful development in God's Work which I know would have soon leaked out and be put on the grapevine. As I have frequently done in the past in my "Personal" in the WN, I want to take all of you brethren into my confidence at the earliest PLANNING STAGES in order to avoid any rumors or distorted versions reaching you which may not be clear.

Now the news:

I am studying the feasibility of reopening Ambassador College, Bricklet Wood!

I have asked our Business Office to conduct a thorough financial feasibility study. Meanwhile, I am conducting far-reaching meetings with many of our leading ministers concerning the necessary personnel changes which would be required, selection of faculty and all of the dozens of related subjects which would need thorough discussion prior to reopening the Bricklet Wood campus.

Brethren, that beautiful, fabulous campus has been simply closed up, with only a token maintenance crew keeping its buildings intact, and we had even allowed the college properties to be listed with one of the leading estate agents in England. I have in my possession their brochure which was published for the purpose of advertising the college as being for sale.

Blood, Sweat and Tears

Here is a complete college campus, representing YEARS of development and the blood, sweat and tears of hundreds of lives, including that of my father, Mr. Herbert Armstrong, who devoted so much of his personal time and energy to the development of the campus in its very early years after he and I together had seen the wonderful possibility of the original grounds of Hanstead House clear back in 1959.

From the time of its closure one (See PERSONAL, page 7)

Conference in England 'profitable'

BIG SANDY — Leslie L. McCullough, director of the International Division, returned to the United States after conducting, along with C. Wayne Cole, director of the U.S. Church Administration Division (CAD), a ministerial conference in England, visiting four Scandinavian services and Bible studies and holding talks with regional directors of the International Division during the three weeks from June 21 to July 13. Brian Knowles, managing editor of The Good News, and Steve Martin, assistant to Mr. McCullough, were also on hand for the conference.

Mr. McCullough said the "working" ministerial conference, held in Bricklet Wood for all ordained men in the British Isles as well as all English-speaking ministers in Europe, was "very profitable."

He said doctrinal and procedural matters were discussed over the four days of meetings, which were held from 10 to 12 in the morning and 2 to 4 in the afternoon.

Mr. McCullough said further meetings with ministers were held over dinner in the evenings.

Mr. Knowles, who toured England and Scotland for a week by car after the conference, said he felt the conference was a unifying influence for the ministry there. "The prime benefit was for the unification which it gave in philosophy, approach and outlook."

The only non-European minister attending the meetings was Bob Fahey, director of the South African (See CONFERENCE, page 7)

Buck Owens, Charley Pride to perform at Festival sites

BIG SANDY — Country-western singer Charley Pride will perform at Niagara Falls, N.Y., and Buck Owens and the Buckaroos, the country-western singing group and principal performers on the U.S. television series Hee Haw, will perform at each of the four Church-owned Festival sites in the United States during the Feast of Tabernacles in September.

According to Festival director Bill McDowell, Buck Owens and his group will perform at Big Sandy; Lake of the Ozarks, Mo.; Wisconsin Dells, Wis.; and Mount Pocono, Pa., on dates yet to be determined.

Mr. McDowell said Garner Ted Armstrong had "asked me to investigate the possibilities of signing quality, name entertainers for some special performances during the Festivals."

Tickets for the Buck Owens performances will sell for $5 each.

Charley Pride Show

The International Convention Center at Niagara Falls has booked Charley Pride's show for an evening during the Feast, according to Gary Antion, Festival coordinator for that site. He said the convention center would give Church members "first shot" at tickets for the show.

The program will be at 8 pm. Thursday, Sept. 25. Tickets are $4. (See BUCK OWENS, page 7)

200 after all?

I want to take issue with the article concerning the upcoming American bicentennial ["Will the U.S. Really Be 200?"] which appeared in the June 23 issue of the WN. The framers of the American nation preserved their intent as to what they had in mind in their writings, and especially in their official documents.

First of all, Jefferson was appointed by representatives of all 13 colonies to draft the Declaration of Independence. Its subtitle was "The unanimous declaration of the thirteen United States of America." I quote segments from the last paragraph of the Declaration: "We, therefore, the representatives of the United States of America . . . solemnly publish and declare, that these united colonies are . . . free and independent states . . ." The Continental Congress further declared: "Resolved — that it be proclaimed in each of the United States at the head of the army." The 13 colonies, now states, unitedly fought and won the war for their independence. In a speech given on July 4, 1831, John Q. Adams (our seventh President) spoke on the Declaration of Independence. His main thrust was to impress on people's minds that the founding fathers had launched a new and unified nation with the Declaration. He was countering arguments concerning a state's right to secede. He said: "The Declaration of Independence announced the severance of the thirteen United Colonies from the rest of the British Empire, and the existence of their people from that day forth as an independent nation. The people of all the colonies, speaking by their representatives, constituted themselves one moral person with which the people of United America, rising in gigantic stature as one man, encircled their brows . . ."

The nation's first postwar government was structured under the Articles of Confederation. It was a type of treaty between independent powers, but all 13 states agreed to abide by the decisions of a "United States in Congress." The states were very jealous of their sovereignty, which was an issue that stirred violent controversy until it was finally laid to rest when Lee offered his sword to Grant at Appomattox. Article I of the "Articles of Confederation of Perpetual Union" reads: "The style of this confederacy shall be 'United States of America.'" Article XIII ends with: "Done at Philadelphia, in the state of Pennsylvania, the 9th day of July, in the year of our Lord 1778, and in the third year of the Independence of America."

The Articles of Confederation as a regulating framework failed to efficiently govern the new nation. As a result a convention was called to amend the articles. The articles were subsequently dropped, and the Constitution was written and finally adopted by the necessary quota of states in 1788. The preamble to the Constitution reads in part: "We the people of the United States . . . do ordain and establish this constitution for the United States of America." It is evident from this and the above that what was established was not a new nation, but a new government for a nation that was clearly already in existence.

John Adams, second President and a signer of the Declaration, stated that: "The 2nd day of July will be the most memorable epoch in the history of America. I am apt to believe that it will be celebrated by succeeding generations as the great anniversary festival. It ought to be commemorated, as the day of deliverance, by solemn acts of devotion to Almighty God. It ought to be solemnized with pomp and parade, with shows, games, sports, guns, bells, bonfires, and illuminations, from one end of this continent to the other, from this time forth and forevermore." I don't know why he thought the day would be July 2, unless it was because Jefferson began drafting the Declaration on that day.

"Will the U.S. Really Be 200?," by John L. Dunkin, The Worldwide News, p. 3, Vol. III, No. 13, June 23, 1975. Well, thanks to Mr. Dunkin we have had a session in American history, which was great! However . . .

According to the Declaration of Independence, found in the Encyclopaedia Britannica, 1970 copyright, Vol. 7, pp. 160-161, where it is reprinted in its entirety, it reads:

DECLARATION OF INDEPENDENCE

"IN CONGRESS, July 4, 1776.

"THE UNANIMOUS DECLARATION of the thirteen united STATES OF AMERICA."

The last paragraph of the Declaration of Independence states: "WE, THEREFORE, the Representatives of the UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, in General Congress, Assembled, appealing to the Supreme Judge of the world for the rectitude of our intentions, do, in the Name, and by Authority of the good People of these Colonies, be FREE AND INDEPENDENT STATES; that they are Absolved from all Allegiance to the British Crown, and that all political connection between them and the State of Great Britain, is and ought to be totally dissolved; and that as Free and Independent States, they have full Power to levy War, conclude Peace, contract Alliance, establish Commerce, and to do all other Acts and Things which Independent States may of right do. — And for the support of this Declaration, with a firm reliance on the protection of divine Providence, we mutually pledge to each other our Lives, our Fortunes and our sacred Honor."

The article on the Declaration of Independence (p. 158, Vol. 7, of Encyclopaedia Britannica) continues: "Declaration of Independence, in the history of the United States, the famous document approved by the continental congress on July 4, 1776, which announced the separation of the 13 colonies from Great Britain and offered a justification therefore. It explained why the congress on July 2 'unanimously' by the votes of twelve colonies, with New York abstaining, resolved that 'these United Colonies are, and of right ought to be Free and Independent States.' Accordingly, the day on which final separation was officially voted was July 2, although the 4th, the day on which the Declaration of Independence was adopted, has always been celebrated in the United States as the great national holiday — the Fourth of July or Independence Day."

This article further comments: "It must remain a great historical landmark in that it contained the first formal assertion by a whole people of their right to a government of their own choice."

Mr. Dunkin has stressed that the Constitutional Congress on Sept. 13, 1788, proclaimed the ratification of the Constitution and ordered the convening of the United States of America on March 4, 1789, and that was the real birthday of Uncle Sam. He is perfectly correct, but the July 4, 1776, date is not set aside as "Constitution Day" but rather as "Independence Day," which is exactly what it was — we declared our independence (as a united 13 colonies) from the British crown as a United States of America (refer to the actual document itself and those are the exact words used).

"Articles of Confederation," p. 525, Vol. 2, 1970 copyright, Encyclopaedia Britannica: "The Articles of Confederation, the first constitution of the United States, were written in 1776-77, ratified March 1, 1781, and served until they were replaced by the constitution of 1787 on March 4, 1789.

"The leaders of the American Revolution were thoroughly familiar with a central government: that of Great Britain. They were familiar too with the idea of a central government in America, since many plans for one had been proposed during the 18th century. Most of the plans had been for frontier defense and none had been adopted, so they offered little guidance in 1776.

"When Americans declared their independence they agreed that the new nation must have a common government, but they disagreed then, as they continued to disagree for generations, about the kind of government it should be and, above all, about the amount of power it should have."

The last paragraph of this article states: "Despite the lack of coercive authority over the states and their citizens, the Articles of Confederation had many of the important provisions later incorporated in the constitution of 1787."

Mr. Dunkin has pointed out the confusion surrounding the meaning of the word state in conjunction with the words nation or country. I refer you again to the original document — the Declaration of Independence. Of course, each state had its own constitution. I believe each state today is considered "sovereign," isn't it? Of course, we are much less sovereign today than they were in 1776, but in the original document those 13 (the number 13 appears in the very heading itself) col-

Corrections

In the July 7 issue of The Worldwide News, the Dallas, Tex., date-line for an article on page 2 headlined "Dallas Seminar Draws 200 Members," about an Ambassador College-sponsored Continuing Education seminar, was misleading. The seminar was held at the Dallas-Fort Worth Regional Airport, which is between Dallas and Fort Worth.

In the same article a paragraph was inadvertently deleted. The paragraph read:

"Most people who attended here were from Dallas and Fort Worth. About 25 attended from the Sherman and Big Sandy churches. Several others attended from as far away as Huntsville and Austin, Tex., 180 miles away, and Houston, Tex., 250 miles away."

An article in The Worldwide News of July 7 entitled "World's Jews Mourn Destruction of Temple," by Mark Kaplan, stated that three weeks before the Jewish fast of the 9th of Ab is a minor day of fasting in the month of Tammuz. The article, thanks to a typographical error, stated that the day is Tammuz 7. It should have read the 17th of Tammuz.

9-year-old prodigious on the piano

By John Robinson

PASADENA — Nine-year-old Debbie Wofford is a musical prodigy.

In case you haven't checked your dictionary recently, one definition of prodigy is "a person endowed with extraordinary gifts."

There can be no doubt Debbie is such a person. Her specialty is the piano, and she's been playing it since she was 3 years old. Her mother says she was humming before she could talk.

Debbie, the daughter of longtime Worldwide Church of God members Don and Floy Wofford, has progressed with her musical talent to the point that in recent months she has memorized all three movements of Mozart's Concerto in A Major. In the three months it took her to commit that equivalent of 82 pages of sheet music to memory, she also learned many new popular tunes for her regular performances.

How many hours a day does she practice?

"Debbie averages 30 to 45 minutes a day practicing," explains her mother. "She practices a few minutes here and there or whenever she can."

Mrs. Wofford says she is not sure how many tunes her daughter has committed to memory, but she suspects it may be as many as 100.

"You see, it's hard to say how many songs she knows, since she is always learning new ones," Mrs. Wofford says. "She's continually picking up additional popular tunes off the radio or from records."

Months of Blackness

Even more remarkable is that Debbie was born blind. At birth cataracts covered both eyes. Mrs. Wofford says she feels all her daughter saw for the first nine months of her life was blackness. She was anointed for her condition by evangelist Herman L. Hoeh.

"Her condition remained the same for quite a while," Mrs. Wofford says. "Then one day at church Dr. Hoeh asked how she was. I told him she was still the same and he said he would pray about it that night. I guess he did because a few days later she was seeing well enough to crawl around the house."

Mr. Wofford says he and his wife later took Debbie to an ophthalmologist who wanted to know when Debbie had had the "cataract operation." When Mr. Wofford told him there had been no operation, he replied, "Well, then it was a miracle."

Though she still has limited sight, her vision has progressed steadily since age 9 months, and she can readily read her regular schoolbooks. She even reads on a sixth-grade level, though she has just completed the third grade. She learns all schoolwork as readily as she learns music.

Mr. Wofford says dozens of people who are not members of the Church have said God has given Debbie the gift of a photographic memory and perfect pitch and rhythm to make up for what He has not given her visually.

Debbie, who doesn't read music, learns songs by listening to a record or a tape recording. Ray Turner, a Hollywood music director and pianist for productions such as The Sound of Music, Dr. Zhivago and Carousel, will play a piece and make a recording of it. Debbie then will listen to the piece several times and commit it to memory.

With more difficult arrangements, a Pasadena music teacher, Mame Laidig, who studied with one of Franz Liszt's students, will help Debbie with the fingering and make tapes of pieces for her. But Debbie requires no help with many pieces, especially popular tunes, and learns after only listening to the tune on the radio a time or two.

'Fun With Debbie'

Debbie has appeared on television

we sing in church.

No Strings Attached

Mr. Wofford says everyone who has heard his daughter says she has a great future in music. But Debbie has had to pass up some "opportunities."

"Some have tried to use Debbie's abilities dishonestly," Mr. Wofford says. "For example, one individual who had just met Debbie wanted to promote her and claim he had taught her for years and his special teaching methods had made Debbie what she is."

The Woffords are not opposed to seeing Debbie make it big, but "we want to guide her life as parents and not turn her over to managers to run every detail of her life. This does not mean we are opposed to the help of competent managers. We seek and receive counsel from the top people in the music and entertainment field and make every effort to give Debbie every opportunity to develop and use her God-given talents."

Mr. Wofford says many who have heard Debbie tell others about her:

"Debbie has even been introduced to congressmen and has an invitation to play in Washington. Her abilities have been praised to musical dignitaries throughout Europe."

So far she has primarily performed at benefits, and her earnings have been minimal, but what she has earned has been placed in a special savings account.

Debbie says she is saving up to buy a piano. What kind of piano?

"I want to buy a Steinway grand," she says.

Isn't that too large? Doesn't she mean a baby grand?

"Yeah, that's right, a baby grand. But I do want a big one."

She says her family might have to move some furniture around to make room for the piano, but she does have her heart set on a good piano. Steinway is her favorite and she has opinions about the touch of a piano. Debbie says the hardest piece she has ever learned to play was one called "Dizzy Fingers"; her favorite is "Skater's Waltz."

What does she do for fun?

"Play the piano."

How about eating ice cream?

"Oh, I forgot about that," she beams, as her parents throw in camping, swimming, riding her bicycle and several other things that she quickly agrees with and adds to her list of fun things.

When she grows up she wants to be a music teacher "like Mrs. Laidig," who teaches her piano, get married and have "five or three children."

She says her classmates at school aren't envious of her musical talent. Her mother says Debbie plays the piano at school while the children sing, so they appreciate Debbie's talents all the more.

The Rest of the Family

Debbie has two brothers and two sisters: Sam, 15; David, 2; Sharon, 11; and Donna, 5. Sam plays the clarinet and the piano with equal proficiency, while Sharon plays the piano a little better than the piano.

Mr. Wofford, 40, works in engineering and construction as a consultant for the Ralph M. Parsons Co. in Pasadena. He is an Ambassador College graduate who was employed by the college here from 1955 to 1965, including five years as a faculty member.

Mrs. Wofford was baptized by Herbert W. Armstrong in Big Sandy shortly before Passover in 1952. Most of her time is spent as a housewife and mother of five, but she also finds time to involve herself heavily with Debbie's activities.

HRIC Assistant Director

PASADENA — The cost of operating an automobile is constantly going up. Rising fuel and auto prices are the two main reasons.

Let's say you bought a new car in 1974 and intended to keep it three years and drive it no more than 10,000 miles a year. How much would the cost of operating it be for the three years?

If the car were midsize, your cost would be 24 cents a mile; if it were a subcompact, 19 cents; and if a standard-size model, 29 cents.

In other words, an owner of a midsize car would pay $2,400 a year, the owner of a subcompact $1,900 and the owner of a standard-size $2,900.

Keep or Trade?

After figuring the costs for operating a car for a given year, the inevitable question is, "Should I keep the car or sell it?"

Sooner or later every owner has to get rid of his car, either by selling it as junk or trading it for another. When to keep a car or trade it is a matter of economic timing.

One factor is important. New cars are shifting downward in size. Too, new cars will be emphasizing more miles per gallon. Owners of midsize or larger cars may feel they should not trade now because of higher values presently placed on used cars. But larger cars won't continue to be in demand if the present economic trend continues. In fact, predictions are that by 1980 compacts and subcompacts will comprise 50 percent of all sales.

Due to problems in the economy, used cars are in big demand. That is, cars that are in good shape.

If a car isn't in good condition, the cost of repairs must be compared with its trade-in value.

Critical List

Here are some symptoms that indicate that a car may soon need costly service repairs:

- The car uses large amounts of oil.
- It emits bluish-white exhaust.
- The engine runs roughly and a tune-up doesn't help.
- The transmission shifts roughly, grinds or clicks after routine adjustments.
- Tire-tread depth is nearing one-sixteenth inch.
- The brake pedal goes almost to the floor on the first push or resists at first, then slowly sinks to the floor under pressure.
- The front end bobs or dips excessively on braking.
- There's too much play or tightness in the steering wheel.
- The starter cranks slowly.
- There's a clanking or similar noise underneath the back seat.

At any rate, a thorough checkup is dollars in the pocket. New diagnostic and inspection services are available throughout the United States.

A rule of thumb: If repairs cost more than half the value of the car, your money may be better spent in investing in a newer and more reliable one.

The Federal Highway Administration claims the accepted life expectancy of a car is 10 years and 100,000 miles. This is a general guide only; well-treated cars can provide owners with 150,000 miles of service or more.

An article outlining the preceding information further reveals a typical 1974 model compact car's repair and maintenance costs in the next 10 years will mount from $108.48 the first year to $319.78 in the fifth year and up to $499.65 in the seventh.

Insurance Economy

If after determining it's more economical to keep an older car, an owner should consider insurance needs.

For instance, if your car turns into its fifth year, it may pay you to drop collision and, perhaps, comprehensive coverage.

Another bit of advice that insurance experts pass along is to take the highest deductible you can afford. If, by chance, you have $50 deductible on a car two to four years old, you might want to raise it to $150.

What can you do to protect yourself against uninsured motorists if you own a car five years old or older? According to Peter Weaver of the Los Angeles Times, car owners can get "uninsured-motorist" coverage in many states that only costs $3 to $6 a year. This coverage protects you if you're hit by an uninsured motorist.

Some states, however, only allow uninsured-motorist coverage for bodily injury, not property damage.

MAIDSTONE, England — Chris Barnes, a member of the Maidstone church, escaped unhurt but with a new nickname from an accident recently.

Mr. Barnes, who plays piano for church services, drives extensively over southern England in connection with his work. Once, while returning to his home in the county of Kent, he fell asleep at the wheel late at night.

Mr. Barnes swerved off the road and plunged several feet down an embankment, rolling the car over.

He suffered no broken bones, and he wasn't bruised.

However, emerging from the car, he fell into some cow manure. The police, who arrived at the scene within minutes, took details from 15 feet away.

BURLEIGH HEADS, Australia — The new administration building for the Australian headquarters of Ambassador College and the Worldwide Church of God is taking shape as construction enters its fourth month.

The 14,000-square-foot building is being built on a six-acre bush-land site here as a part of a decentralization project, first planned in 1972.

To reduce the effects of congestion and upward-spiraling costs on the Work and its staff, the administrative BAD OEYENHAUSEN, West Germany — For the fifth consecutive year students from Ambassador College are spending the summer here. This year 17 are working and studying in this health-resort community in a valley about 40 miles southwest of Hannover.

Walter Rupp, chairman of Ambassador College's Foreign Language Department in Pasadena, the program's resident director, is teaching three classes: German civilization, advanced German and an undergraduate seminar.

Fifteen of the students, together with an Ambassador student who is now in Switzerland and another who is working this summer in the Bonn office of the Work, flew from Los Angeles to Frankfurt and were met there by Frank Schnee, director of the German Work, and others from the Bonn office. The 15 then traveled from Frankfurt to Bad Oeynhausen via chartered bus and were met at the Koenigshof Hotel by Mr. Rupp and the families the students are living with.

This summer the students are working in a greenhouse, flower shop, cafe, diabetes clinic, grocery store and other businesses. Overall the group is happy and enjoying the contact with people of another culture and tongue.

The program began in 1971 when four Ambassador College German students — Paul Kieffer, Rita Mathwig, Shirley Hegvold and Jon Rogers — responded to employment ads in German newspapers. The only reply to their inquiries came from the Wohnbau, a Bad Oeynhausen architectural and construction firm that agreed to hire one student. In addition, however, Wohnbau voluntarily placed an advertisement in a local newspaper and found jobs for the other three Ambassador students.

In 1972 Mr. Rupp organized a program for 12 students. The college hired Wolfgang Linnebruegge, a bilingual employee of Wohnbau, to teach a German-history class.

The program was repeated in 1973 and reached its peak enrollment with 20 students — 10 from Pasadena, nine from Big Sandy and one from Bricket Wood, England — during the day and attending class one evening a week. Graduate Paul Kieffer taught a German-grammar class for the lower-level students, and Mr. Linnebruegge taught German history in German for the more advanced. A number of students received scholarships paying for plane fare and Eurail passes (two months of unlimited train travel in Europe).

departments of Ambassador College and the Worldwide Church of God were moved from Sydney in early 1974 to the rural area of Burleigh Heads, 570 miles north of Sydney and just south of Brisbane.

This new location offers close access to big-city communications and shipping facilities and has the added advantages of less congestion, less air pollution, an opportunity for the Work here to own its own facilities, and lower-cost housing for employees.

Since the move, relocated departments (Mail Processing, Accounting, Data Processing and Church Administration) have been temporarily housed in offices in downtown Burleigh Heads but should be in the new facilities by February of next year.

The new building is of a single-level, rustic design, with mottled clinker brickwork and cedar paneling and roofing. This is to blend with the building's subtropical bush-land setting.

Around the building will be native Australian flora, requiring minimum maintenance and insuring that wildlife remains in the area.

The front wall follows the contours of the site and is almost totally of glass; this is to create a feeling that employees are working among the native trees and flowers on the site. This approach also allows natural light into most of the office area, reducing eye strain and power consumption.

The office staff expects the building to be completed in December, 1975.

Three years, 24,000 miles later

By Gary Hopkins

BONN — The Work's office here on June 9 celebrated the debut of Willi and Hella Frostl as man and wife.

The celebration marked the end of an arduous ordeal for this couple with the East German bureaucracy.

The Frostls were married April 5 in Zwickau, East Germany (The Worldwide News, May 12). Two months later, on June 8, Mrs. Willi Frostl, formerly Hella Pistorius, legally drove across the communist border with her husband. After a long battle of disappointments mixed with miraculous turns in events, permission to leave East Germany was granted on June 1, exactly three years after their first meeting in Zwickau.

When Austrian Willi Frostl received the news June 5 that his East German wife had been granted permission to join him in the West, he immediately set out on the last of many such trips.

Willi's latest 630-mile trip concluded his monthly visits to Hella and brought an end to their letter writing. Over the last three years Willi's travels to and from, and throughout, East Germany amounted to 24,000 miles, once around the world.

The real breakthrough for them in their long quest to marry came on April 1. After many dashed hopes, they finally received government permission to marry. Frank Schnee, director of the German Work, married the patient pair April 5 in Zwickau, after a 33-month engagement. A few close relatives and friends were there.

Then, May 11, a celebration was held to enable 100 Church members and relatives to honor the Frostls. (This coincided with the wedding of Gotthard Behnisch, the German Plain Truth's managing editor, and Brigitte Orloff, secretary for the office here, in East Berlin's Opera Cafe.)

The May 11 celebration was also the first opportunity since 1971, when Hella's brother married in East Berlin, that the 10 East German Church members could participate in a social with their brethren from the West German churches of Hamburg, Hannover, Duesseldorf, Frankfurt and Stuttgart.

The heat wave of the future: 30 degrees won't chill you

By Gary E. Antion
WEST HILL, Ont. — Skis strapped to the car with all the proper winter gear are not uncommon as U.S. vacationers seeking winter fun cross over into Ontario during the summer months.

Unfortunately, in summer Canada does have summer weather.

But you might read of a "30-degree heat wave" in Toronto before the summer's over. That's because Canada is converting to the metric system and the reading is Celsius (centigrade). Zero is freezing instead of 32 degrees, as on the Fahrenheit scale.

Larry Chanasyk, a member of Toronto West, is the chairman of Toronto's Metric Committee. He says 96 percent of the world is already on the metric system.

The metric conversion has now begun and is supposed to peak in 1978, with gradual changes until then. The temperature is given on radio and television news in Celsius, so 30 degrees is really a heat wave.

To figure the Fahrenheit scale from Celsius, a simple approximation can be made by doubling the figure and adding 32. So, 30 degrees Celsius is about 92 degrees Fahrenheit (30 times 2 plus 32). It may seem funny to hear readings in the 20s for springtime, but that's 72 degrees Fahrenheit and above.

Distances are now being posted in kilometers as well as miles to acquaint the public with the metric units.

The United States is also going metric, but that country is a few years behind Canada in the changeover.

Mr. Chanasyk sums up the metric conversion with a poem:

Metric is making my life more mundane
And round about my backside it gives me a pain.
I like my miles, my hands and my feet,
The liters and meters, they just have me beat!
And Celsius, oh, it gives me a chill,
So just a bit slower, please, if you will.
Grant me the time to learn gallons from liters,
And also my distance from miles to meters.
And then in the end I'll accept it too,
But I don't have to like it, and neither do you!

OLD TAPPAN, N.J. — According to Mrs. Clifton Demarest of Old Tappan, an inexpensive hair spray can be made from lemon- or orange-flavored gelatin.

A STORY FOR CHILDREN By Shirley King Johnson

Major was sick. Jim Wilson knew something was wrong when he called to the beagle to come upstairs when he got up Sunday morning. Going down to investigate, he saw Major was still lying in his basket-bed.

"Oh-h-h," Major moaned, his eyes rolling up to look at Jim. He seemed to say, "My tummy aches."

Jim saw he had been sick during the night. He cleaned up the place and ran upstairs to his father.

Mr. Wilson had just sat down at the breakfast table with Jim's mother and little sister Susan.

"Major's sick," Jim announced.

"Oh? What's the matter?" asked his father.

Something He Ate

Mr. Wilson went down to look Major over. "Let's get him some fresh, cool water and keep him quiet down here today," he said. "If he's not better by tomorrow I'll take him to the vet. It's probably something he ate."

At noon company came to dinner. They were a family that was new in church with two boys nearly Jim's age. Jim had a good time playing ball in the backyard with them. But he missed Major. Major liked to chase fly balls.

After their company went home Jim trotted downstairs to check on Major. He was lying beside the washing machine. His eyes opened. "My tummy!" he moaned.

Jim refilled the water dish and went to find his father. Mr. Wilson sat at his desk in the den, working on a speech for Spokesman Club. He looked up as Jim entered. "Is Major any better?"

"No, sir. I'm worried. What if he dies?"

Mr. Wilson gave Jim's shoulder a reassuring pat. "He's going to be all right."

"Would you ask our minister to anoint him?"

"I know how concerned you are son, but we wouldn't want our Lord to have to take that terrible beating for just a dog's healing, would we? Or for any other pet — a cat or parakeet, for instance?"

"No, sir, I suppose not," Jim was quiet for a moment. "There isn't any heaven for dogs, is there?"

Mr. Wilson put both arms around Jim and drew him close. "People don't go to heaven when they die; neither do animals."

"They sleep in the ground," Jim said, remembering what he had learned when Aunt Jessie had died.

"Yes. And everybody who has ever lived will be resurrected at one time or another."

"Only people will be resurrected?"

"That's right. Do you know why they'll be resurrected and animals won't?"

"No, sir."

"It's because there's a spirit in man. God keeps a kind of a record of man's character, and He uses that spirit to resurrect him. But the Bible doesn't mention any animals being in a resurrection at all. They don't have a spirit. And it's a good thing; think how crowded the earth would be."

Jim's teeth pressed his lower lip as he pondered the subject. "But God can do anything, can't He?"

"Sure, He can."

"Then couldn't He resurrect just Major if I asked?"

"Jim, God has a great big plan for this world. It just happens that no animal is included in His resurrection plans. But wasn't it nice that He made pets for us to enjoy? He knew little boys and girls would need dogs to love."

Jim smiled. "I sure do love Major."

Any Kind of Dogs

"That's fine. When you get to be a member of the God Family you can create all the beagle dogs you want. Or any kind of dogs and any number."

Jim's world brightened. "St. Bernards? A great, big brown-and-white St. Bernard?" He had wanted that kind when they bought Major, but Mr. Wilson had said those dogs were too big for city living.

"Sure. Two of them," replied his father.

"Or even three?"

"Four."

"Say! That'll be something!"

Jim changed Major's water before he went to bed. In the morning he hoped the beagle would come up the stairs to meet him, but there was no little clicking paw sound at the basement door. He went to his father's bedroom. Mr. Wilson was almost ready to leave for the office.

"Good morning, Jim. You slept late."

"Good morning. I'm afraid Major's still sick."

"Oh? Is he still in his bed?"

"I don't know. I'm afraid to look."

"I'll go down with you."

'Naughty Doggie'

As they left the bedroom Jim heard the basement door slam and little Susie began wailing in the kitchen. "Naughty doggie!"

Jim hurried fast to the kitchen. "Sue, you didn't go downstairs, did you?"

She turned blue eyes on him, tears trembling on her lashes. "Naughty Major ate my breakfast' beef," she wailed.

"He did? What'd you give it to him for? You know he's not well."

Susie shook her head, and blond curls danced on her shoulders. "I was going to pet him. He ate my breakfast' beef."

"It's your own fault for taking it down there," Jim scolded.

"Wait a second," said their father. "If Major's eating again he's all right."

Jim turned to the basement door. "He must be better."

As he reached for the doorknob a clicking sound came low on the other side of the door. He opened it and Major bounded through, smiling, tail wagging, ready for breakfast.

Dropping to his knees, Jim hugged him to his chest. "Good old Major! Those St. Bernards are going to have to go some to be nice as you."

AC students cut second all-original record

By Perry R. Hoag

BIG SANDY — The Ambassador College Band and New World Singers have produced their second stereo record album, Look the World in the Eye. The album contains the best of the music from the 1974 Big Sandy Feast show, Skool Daze, an original musical comedy that portrayed the lighter side of life at Ambassador.

Big Sandy Dean of Students Ronald Kelly said of Look the World in the Eye:

"The opportunity to produce a record and be able to make it available to members of the Church is a tremendous privilege enjoyed by Ambassador College students.

"This second album is even more exciting and of higher quality than the first, which was enjoyed by so many. We are very happy to be able to share this small part of college life with members of the Church and hope it will bring many hours of enjoyable listening to those who purchase the record.

"Early releases of the record have been played on various radio stations with many enthusiastic comments coming from local East Texans who have received their copies already. We know you will enjoy yours."

Utilizing Principles

The music in the album was written, arranged and performed entirely by Ambassador students and staffers.

Gary Briggs, music instructor and band director, stressed the educational value of the album.

"It gives the students of our arranging, songwriting and music-theory classes an excellent opportunity to utilize the principles they have learned in a practical context, while affording those who purchase the album quality music," he said.

The music is designed to suit a wide array of tastes, ranging from "Isn't It Just Like a Loving God," which is performed for special music at Sabbath services and in Garner Ted Armstrong's campaigns, to "Daddy Always Used to Tell Me," for country fans, to "New Plans," an up-tempo number also used in Mr. Armstrong's campaigns.

While on tour with Skool Daze at Feast sites in Big Sandy, Niagara Falls, N.Y.; Mount Pocono, Pa.; Jekyll Island, Ga.; and St. Petersburg, Fla., Feast-show performers heard many requests from Church members that a record of music from the show be produced. The first album, Spread Some Sunshine, was so successful, selling more than 8,000 copies, that a second record-making venture was decided upon.

16 Tracks

The latest album was recorded last January during and after the college semester break. The recording sessions were in four stages. The soloists and rhythm section recorded for two days, followed by two days of recording the brass and two more for the 12-member New World Singers. Then the recording engineer spent two days mixing the 16 tracks into one stereo tape to be transferred onto the record discs.

Senior Class President Mike Hale, who is a soloist for the singers and also performs in campaigns, feels Spread Some Sunshine was an excellent first effort but said Look the World in the Eye "is definitely of finer quality. We recorded it in one of the best studios in the Dallas [Tex.] area."

Band director Briggs added, "Helen Reddy, Merle Haggard and a lot of the big names" have recorded at Sumet-Bernet Sound Studios, where the record was produced.

Available in Record Time

Look the World in the Eye is now available by mail (see coupon at the bottom of this page).

Last year those processing the orders for Spread Some Sunshine had some difficulty because of the unexpected large number of orders.

Record-sales coordinator Jan Gully, a senior student, apologized on behalf of the student body to those whose orders were delayed.

But this time, Mr. Gully said, plenty of records are on hand and ready to be mailed out. He said a new computerized processing system will cut delivery time to six weeks.

Proceeds from the album will go into the student-body fund, which finances all student activities at Big Sandy. The traditional annual Mexico City senior trip, for example, is financed by this fund, as are dances, sing-alongs and other activities.

Tony Hill, student-body president, said the students here want to do their share to further the goals of the college and the Work.

"We're planning a new large sign to be placed at the main entrance of the college and hope to make sizable offerings to the Church."

AMBASSADOR COLLEGE BAND AND NEW WORLD SINGERS

A Personal Letter from

year ago, the campus has remained completely intact.

All of the required equipment — including dormitories, wardrobes, furniture, beds, dressers, sheets and linens, silverware, dishes, etc. — is exactly where it was carefully put away and stored, ready for use!

The big, beautiful gymnasium and natatorium are ready for use (the gymnasium is still used as the meeting site for the local church each Sabbath).

The library has each volume it contained at the time of its closure!

What I am proposing is reopening Bricket Wood with a streamlined curriculum aimed primarily at developing the ministry and leaders who would go into the International Division (which we previously referred to as the Foreign Work).

I cannot announce at this time the officials who would be selected for each responsibility, since I am still in the very early stages of conferring with many of our top men concerning some of these decisions.

However, I wanted to announce this exciting news to you in the very initial planning stages, because I know how quickly information of this kind can leak out, perhaps becoming somewhat distorted and misunderstood. And I wanted to share it with you personally before that could occur.

'How Much Will It Cost?'

The big question will be, "How much will it cost?"

Brethren, believe it or not, we are striving to find ways to continue with our stated policy of having the Work in Britain placed on indigenous income beginning in January, 1976.

At the present time only a remaining small monthly allocation is being sent to Bricket Wood during the process of phasing out the campus and the retirement of existing overdraft debt and the conducting of the Work in England.

With income from our British members, coworkers and donors, however, the Work in England still has viability and strength.

Because of international monetary laws, it is virtually impossible to utilize moneys accumulated in foreign offices for the Work in the United States, even though they may represent a slight excess from time to time.

To make it easily understood, that merely means that if, for example, our brethren in New Zealand are very willing and generous and are giving to God's Work of their tithes and offerings at a rate which builds up a surplus over and above what is required to conduct the Work in New Zealand, that money must remain in New Zealand; it cannot be sent out of the country. Most countries have laws which prohibit the export of their money to other nations! This is particularly true in countries such as South Africa, Australia, Canada and others.

HOWEVER, we are investigating the possibility of scholarships for international students which may be able to help pay the education of students from many foreign countries, utilizing moneys which would otherwise not be available for any purpose, save the Work conducted within the borders of that specific country.

As you can understand, there is much to be researched and there are many decisions to be made.

However, I am announcing at this time that we are in the beginning feasibility study concerning the possibility of reopening the Bricket Wood campus, and we are all hoping and praying that we can find the ways and means to do so even by this coming fall term!

Begin With 120 Students

I am proposing that we begin with only around 120 students and appropriate faculty and staff, and not reopen with the full complement of 250, initially.

Some of the existing facilities, notably the dining hall, had already become very much overcrowded at the capacity 250-student level. It is my intention to select a top group of our international students for the Bricket Wood campus and design the curriculum to offer a streamlined college program aimed directly at training future ministers and other leaders for Christ's Work in nations all around the world.

Well, that's it! I wanted you to share the excitement and enthusiasm with the rest of us as we are busily making the plans for reopening Bricket Wood. I hope you will pray that God will provide a way whereby we may do so even this coming autumn!

If for some reason our many feasibility studies indicate it would not be wise to reopen this soon — or some completely unforeseen international emergency or national economic emergency comes along to prevent it — then of course we would have to make the decision based on all the factors and might have to abandon the program to reopen that campus.

However, I know that it will be met with a great deal of excitement and enthusiasm throughout the entirety of God's Church and the colleges to know that we may again be able to reactivate the fabulously beautiful and well-equipped grounds of our Bricket Wood campus and once again know that a dynamic group of bright and happy young students is living, working, studying and developing for use in Christ's Work on the lovely campus grounds just outside London!

As I have any further decisions to announce, I will place them here in my "Personal" column. There may be some far-reaching personnel changes involving the International Work, but I do not wish to create speculation and would prefer to withhold any proposed alterations in individual responsibility until the decisions have become final and you can read them as an accomplished act, rather than initial speculation.

Brethren, I am going to simply trust in your good judgment as I use my "Personal" column to discuss some of the far-ranging top-level decisions which must be made in God's Work!

I remind you again this is a feasibility study, and there are so many factors which will need to be weighed that it is not outside the realm of possibility that we will have to delay the reopening of the Bricket Wood campus or, as I have explained, abandon the idea all together!

However, I am at the present about 60 to 70 percent sure that we will reopen the Bricket Wood campus this fall!

Until next time,
Garner Ted Armstrong

Wood, on June 21, 1974, and that it will take time for it to sink in.

Martin Regtien, 1975 Big Sandy graduate, who would have been a senior in Bricket Wood for the 1974-75 school year, said the announcement is "splendid," but "it will take so much to set it up again."

'Thrilled and Overwhelmed'

Jeannette van Pelt, a senior at Big Sandy, who also would have been a 1975 graduate from Bricket Wood if the campus had remained open, said she "was thrilled and overwhelmed." Miss van Pelt, who was employed at Bricket Wood until she had to leave because of passport problems two months ago, said, "The people there were always hopeful, but it looked kind of doubtful."

She said she was surprised that the campus may reopen so soon, but that she "can see how it is possible."

She said, "The dormitories are like they were when students moved out of them last summer, the dining hall and kitchen facilities are still intact, classrooms are sitting there, the library is completely stocked with books, and the gymnasium and swimming pool are still functioning."

office. Mr. McCullough said Mr. Fahey was in Nairobi, Kenya, doing a follow-up lecture for Herbert W. Armstrong's campaign there and that he came to England to discuss the opening of a Kenyan office.

Mr. McCullough said details of the opening of a Kenyan office are not final.

After the conference Mr. McCullough went to Brussels and Copenhagen. He held services or Bible studies in Aarhus, Denmark; Oslo, Norway; and Stockholm, Sweden.

After the tour of Scandinavia he went to Bonn for meetings with members of the German office and then to London, where he held several meetings with Charles Hunting, director of the Work in Britain.

One item Mr. McCullough discussed with Mr. Hunting was transfers of ministers and ministerial assistants. Ministerial assistant Colin Sutcliffe and local elder Peter McLean will be transferred to Australia. Pastor Bob Morton will go to Pasadena for the fall semester of classes, then be reassigned. Local elder David Stirk and local elder Ron Stoddart will go to South Africa, as will ministerial assistant David Hulme, who will work in the newsstand area with the Plain Truth.

Preaching elder Stuart Powell will move to Oslo by the first of the year in his capacity as coordinator of the Scandinavian Work.

Mr. McCullough said the Scandinavian area has "a lot of potential for growth." He said PT newsstand response has been "very good."

Blind woman wins gold medal in competition for disabled

By Jack Kost

LONDON, Ont. — "I never dreamed I'd win!" exclaimed an elated Kerry Winsch after winning two gold medals. "I was just so thrilled at the prospect of even participating in athletic competition, let alone winning. Being handicapped as I am, it fulfilled a deep craving I've had as long as I can remember. Now I feel more like a normal human being than ever before."

Miss Winsch, a 22-year-old resident of London, has been blind since birth. She began attending services of the Worldwide Church of God in November, 1974.

Participating in the Ontario Games for the Physically Disabled for the first time June 19 to 21, Miss Winsch won gold medals in the 60-meter run and discus competition and bronze medals in the shot-put and walking-race events.

More than 160 handicapped people (some of whom were wheelchair amputees) took part. The three-day event was sponsored by the Ministry of Culture and Recreation of the Canadian government. Plans are for national competition next June to select a Canadian team that would compete in Olympic competition for the disabled. Toronto will be the host of these international games in August, 1976.

"Over 1,700 athletes from about 55 nations will be there," Miss Winsch said. "I'm going to give it my best. I sure would like to be a part of it."

She plans to start training soon in hopes of representing Canada for that international event.

Two brothers will compete for Teenage Mr. America

By Dee Dee Morgan

MADISON, Ind. — Danny and Tommy Wingham of the Louisville, Ky., church will compete in the Teenage Mr. America contest in New York Sept. 7.

Danny is 19; his brother Tommy is 16.

The boys are the sons of Mr. and Mrs. Tom Wingham of Madison, members of the Louisville church.

Danny finished fourth in the contest finals last year in New York. Perhaps his strongest competitor for the title this fall will be Tommy. Both boys have been in training for several years, Danny starting at age 15 and Tommy at 12.

They used a home gymnasium, and their father provided equipment and encouragement.

They lifted weights and did sit-ups and leg-extension exercises. They also used a reclining bench press to build up the chest and a rolling machine for the back.

At their high school here, 255 pounds is listed as the school record for the bench press. Danny, after a full day of construction work, can bench-press this amount 13 times. Tommy can perform this feat four times, also after a day's work.

Tommy interrupted his body-building workouts for a while to take karate classes last year, but now he is back to weight training every day. His weight is 170 now, but he plans to be at 180 by contest time.

Both boys will cut back on carbohydrates and eat lots of liver and steak a few weeks before the contest.

Danny has been a member of the World Body Builders Guild since last year, when he competed against 40 teenagers with the best physiques in the United States.

This year will be Danny's last shot at the title; the age limit is 19.

'WN' interviews members

Members of the Church's Doctrinal Committee, introduced on these pages, are the nucleus of the group assigned by Garner Ted Armstrong to study, research and compile the doctrines of the Worldwide Church of God.

Many other ministers or researchers contribute to the committee or sit in on meetings, depending on the topic currently under study. For example, faculty members visiting headquarters from the Texas campus of Ambassador may sit in on committee meetings and contribute, or other headquarters ministers with a particular expertise may attend a series of meetings on a given topic.

The makeup of the committee, whose members represent varied experiences and training, is flexible; the men interviewed here constitute the group as of June, 1975. The committee is chaired by evangelist C. Wayne Cole, director of the Church Administration Division.

C. Wayne Cole, 45, in addition to serving as director of the Church Administration Division (CAD), is chairman of the Doctrinal Committee. His goal in that responsibility is to keep meetings open and help provide an atmosphere for fair presentation of all material.

His contact with the Work and Herbert W. Armstrong dates back to the 1930s, when he was a child growing up in Oregon.

He began attending Ambassador College after the Feast of Tabernacles in 1950 and graduated with a bachelor-of-arts degree in theology in June, 1954.

Since graduation, Mr. Cole has held numerous positions with the Work. For seven years he served as a field minister. His former pastorates include Corpus Christi, Tex.; Tacoma, Wash.; St. Louis, Mo.; Chicago, Ill.; Milwaukee, Wis.; Pittsburgh, Pa.; Memphis, Tenn.; and Little Rock, Ark.

In 1961 he and his family were transferred to Australia to head the Work there. One of his children was born in Australia during that 11-year tenure of service. In 1969 he was named vice president for financial affairs and planning for the college and Church for Australia, New Zealand and the Far East.

He returned to headquarters in 1972 to serve as vice president in charge of publishing. He assumed his present CAD responsibility in 1974.

Mr. Cole married Doris Allen in 1953.

They have three children: Randall Brian, 19; Richard Allen, 10; and Patricia Ann, 17. Richard was born in Australia.

Mr. Cole adds to his background of 21 years in the ministry (12 of which he has been an evangelist) extensive travel through the Far East and Europe. He conducted baptizing tours through Singapore, East Malaysia and Indonesia. And he and committee member Raymond McNair teamed up for a 5,000-mile tour of India.

He feels the opportunity to work closely with Herbert W. Armstrong for many years is a definite plus in his present role as committee chairman.

Worldwide Church of God business manager Frank Brown, 38, is a regular participant in the committee, but points out that his contribution is not so much in the area of scholarship as it is to "round out the committee" and to contribute from a vantage point other than strict research.

He has been in the ministry for 10 years (he was ordained a preaching elder in 1965 and a pastor in 1968). For nine years he has been involved in financial affairs and planning. He feels his tenure in the ministry and his Bible background, coupled with his experience in the Work and serving as a division head, enhance his contribution.

Mr. Brown is a native of England. He lived there until 1965. He attended Ambassador College in Bricket Wood, England, from 1961 to 1965. He received his bachelor-of-arts degree in theology from that campus in 1965 and later the same year married an American girl, Sharon Roesler. They have two daughters: Rachel, 8½, and Elizabeth, 7½. Mr. Brown was also awarded a master-of-arts degree in theology from Ambassador College, Pasadena, in 1968.

He has traveled widely while in the Work. He led a French-speaking baptizing tour through Switzerland, France and Belgium in 1965; the year before, he spent the summer touring the British Isles. He visited South Africa, Australia, New Zealand, Mexico, Canada and "most states in the union."

He said when he came to Ambassador he had a good working knowledge of French and German but both have fallen into disuse in recent years. He served as a theology instructor at the Pasadena campus from 1968 to 1971.

Mr. Brown lists his hobbies as his job, reading modern political histories and playing bridge.

Dr. Charles Verne Dorothy, 41-year-old father of five, holds degrees from the University of Washington, Ambassador College and the Universidad Americana of Saltillo, Mexico.

He graduated cum laude with a bachelor-of-arts degree in political science from the University of Washington in 1955. The same year he enrolled as an undergraduate student at Ambassador, Pasadena, where he assisted with college classes and taught at nearby Imperial Schools.

He received a bachelor-of-arts degree in theology and Spanish from Ambassador in 1958 and was ordained a preaching elder the same year. Since then he has served on the Ambassador faculties of Pasadena and Big Sandy, including an eight-year stint as dean of faculty on the Texas campus. He also headed the Spanish Work for a number of years before assuming his present responsibilities in doctrinal research. He also teaches theology classes at Ambassador.

By spending summers in Mexico while attending the Universidad Americana he earned an M.A. and Ph.D. in Latin American studies.

Dr. Dorothy, a pastor since 1963, is fluent in Spanish and has a reading knowledge of Portuguese. With three years of Greek and Hebrew at Fuller Theological Seminary in Pasadena some years ago, he is now taking graduate classes in theology at both Fuller and the Southern California School of Theology at Claremont. He traveled extensively throughout the Holy Land, including a special tour in Turkey of the seven churches of Revelation 2 and 3. He spent a total of more than a year in Mexico, Central and South America and "traveled all over Asia at personal expense."

Mrs. Dorothy is the former JoAnn Felt. They have been married almost 18 years. Their children are Charlye Ann, 15; Creston, 13; Charina, 11; Chad, 10; and Chrysti, 7.

Dr. Dorothy contributes to the committee a "long-standing interest in biblical studies," thousands of hours of personal study over the past 20 years and what he feels is an ability to "synthesize" material.

Latvian-born Gunar Freibergs lived five years in Germany and 10½ years in Australia before joining the Ambassador College, Pasadena, staff in 1967 as a full-time instructor.

Mr. Freibergs, a local elder since 1965, is vice chairman of the Theology Department and teaches classes in theology, church history and prophecy.

He attended Ambassador College from 1960 to 1963 and was awarded a bachelor-of-arts degree in theology in 1963.

Five years later he entered a master's program in medieval history at the University of Cincinnati, Ohio, and received his degree the following year, 1969. He is now pursuing a doctorate in medieval history at the University of Southern California, Los Angeles.

Mr. Freibergs, 39, speaks fluent German, Latvian and English. He also has a "reading knowledge of Spanish, French and Italian and a fair reading knowledge of Latin."

His wife, the former Jan Barnett, whom he married in 1963, speaks English, German and Spanish and shares his interest in languages.

He feels he brings to the committee a special interest in ancient and medieval history, Bible exegesis and prophecy. He feels those interests have been heightened by extensive travel in Western Europe, Australia, the Middle East and North Africa.

DOCTRINAL COMMITTEE — Beginning in the upper-left-hand corner and continuing counterclockwise are C. Wayne Cole, Frank Brown, Raymond McNair, Charles Dorothy, Gunar Freibergs, Lester Grabbe, Herman Hoeh, Robert Kuhn and Brian Knowles.

Mr. and Mrs. Freibergs, a son Tal, 10, and a daughter Karina, 6, live in Pasadena, where Mr. Freibergs has "about 30 chickens and nine ducks" tucked away in his backyard.

He lists his hobbies as hiking and "chicken farming."

Lester Grabbe, 29, is an assistant professor of theology at Ambassador College and also teaches Greek and Hebrew. He attended the Brickwood campus of Ambassador from 1965 to 1968. He received his bachelor-of-arts degree in 1968 and a master of arts in 1970. Both degrees are from Ambassador and both are in theology.

He has just completed his requirements for a Ph.D. in religion at Southern California School of Theology at Claremont. His concentration at Claremont was in language and literature relating to the Bible. In addition to the required programs of reading knowledge of Greek, Hebrew, French and German, he also took classes in or researched the Aramaic, Syriac, Akkadian, Ugaritic, Arabic and Ethiopian languages.

He also studied the Dead Sea Scrolls under Professor William Brownlee, one of the first men to work with the scrolls.

Mr. Grabbe's thesis, Comparative Philology and the Text of Job: A Study in Methodology, was an investigation into the use of other Semitic languages to help elucidate problems in the Hebrew Old Testament text.

Mr. Grabbe presented two papers before the Pacific Coast section of the Society of Biblical Literature (SBL). The titles of the papers were "Maccabean Chronology: New Light on an Old Problem" and "Jewish Christianity Before and After 70 A.D."

In addition to membership in the SBL, he also belongs to the International Organization for Septuagint and Cognate Studies and the International Organization for Masoretic Studies.

Mrs. Grabbe is the former Elizabeth Wood. She is English by birth and is an accomplished pianist who accompanies soloists on personal-appearance campaigns and accompanies the headquarters-church choir. Mr. and Mrs. Grabbe have two children: Heather, 4, and Bruce, 2.

Mr. Grabbe's hobbies are listening to music (especially of the Renaissance period) and gourmet dining. He has a special interest in the Renaissance.

Dr. Herman L. Hoeh is a senior Plain Truth editor, member of the board of trustees of Ambassador College, Pasadena, an evangelist and marital counselor "by need if not by choice."

Dr. Hoeh, 46, has been a coworker for over 30 years and was one of four pioneer students who entered Ambassador College in 1947. From Ambassador he received his A.B. degree in foreign languages in 1951, an M.A. in theology in 1952 and then was awarded a Th.D. and Ph.D. for his work with Vol. I and II of his Compendium of World History.

He speaks English and German and reads French and Spanish and has studied Greek at Fuller Theological Seminary in Pasadena. He is one of the seven original evangelists ordained in 1953 and has known Herbert W. Armstrong for nearly 30 years.

This contact with Mr. Armstrong, he feels, gives him the ability to reflect to the committee questions Mr. Armstrong has or would have on a given study and helps him present the study results to Mr. Armstrong in a way that focuses "on what he wants to know" about a given research project.

Dr. Hoeh and his wife, the former Isabella F. Kunkel, live in Sunland, Calif., a suburb of Los Angeles bordering the high desert about 17 miles from the campus. They have four children: Karlene, 19; Anneliese, 16; Manfred, 13; and Gilda Marie, 11. The Hoehs have been married almost 22 years.

Geology, archaeology and the study of ancient and medieval history are among Dr. Hoeh's interests. He also enjoys encouraging his wife in the cooking of exotic foods and the preparation of native dishes from the nation's he's visited.

He has written dozens of Plain Truth and Good News articles over two decades and was Plain Truth managing editor 19 years.

He taught at Ambassador from 1951 to 1972 and served as dean of faculty.

He has visited 50 countries, including Nigeria, the Belgian Congo (Zaire), Afghanistan and the Soviet Union. In the Soviet Union he discussed the history of that country with leading Soviet historians.

Good News managing editor Brian Knowles, 34, began his employment with the Work "stuffing literature" in the Vancouver, B.C., office in 1964. After a few months he became a mail reader and after the Feast of Tabernacles in 1965 became a ministerial assistant in Edmonton, Alta.

He was ordained a local elder in the spring of 1966 and remained in Edmonton until entering Ambassador College, Pasadena, in the fall of 1968. After two semesters of study at Ambassador he was ordained a preaching elder and assigned to pastor the Tulsa, Okla., church and start a church in Ponca City, Okla.

While serving as a field minister, Mr. Knowles began a writing career. His first contribution was handwritten, so David Jon Hill sent him a typewriter. Mr. Hill was then serving as managing editor of Tomorrow's World, a magazine published by the Work from 1969 to 1972. In 1971 Mr. Knowles returned to Pasadena to become an associate editor for Tomorrow's World and was named managing editor two months before the magazine was discontinued.

After the cancellation of the magazine he worked with the Booklet Department, producing and updating booklets. He still works with the program in addition to his Good News responsibilities.

Mr. Knowles, a native of Winnipeg, Man., is married to the former Marie Leduc. The couple has three sons: David, 9; Jeff, 7; and Jon, 2½. Mr. Knowles and his wife were baptized together by James Friddle in 1961, though they were not married at the time.

He has taught theological journalism and systematic theology at Ambassador, Pasadena, and toured the Middle East with archaeologist Jack Finegan, professor of the New Testament at Pacific School of Religion at Berkeley, Calif.

Mr. Knowles, who worked as a commercial artist before being employed by the Work, lists his hobbies as art, weight training and Bible archaeology. He still paints and loves to doodle and draw cartoons. He has sold dozens of paintings over the years through art galleries.

Dr. Robert Kuhn, 30, assistant to Garner Ted Armstrong, studied at New York University and the University of Rochester before receiving a bachelor-of-arts degree in human biology from Johns Hopkins University in 1964. That same year he began a three-year program at the University of California at Los Angeles (UCLA) that ended with his receiving a doctorate in brain research.

Dr. Kuhn entered Ambassador College, Pasadena, in 1966 as an undergraduate student while still involved in his doctoral program at UCLA. He received a bachelor-of-arts degree in theology from Ambassador in 1969.

In his third year at Ambassador he began work as an assistant to evangelist David Jon Hill. He retained that job after graduation and became an associate editor of Tomorrow's World magazine, a theological publication of the Work published from 1969 to 1972. Drawing from his background in brain research, he also worked extensively with Herbert W. Armstrong on a series of articles for the Work's publications centering around the Church's doctrine on the spirit in man.

He became an assistant to Garner Ted Armstrong in 1972 and was recently named an executive director of the Ambassador International Cultural Foundation.

Dr. Kuhn married Dora Servarayan in June, 1967. The couple has three children: Aaron, 7; Adam, 5; and Daniella, 4.

Dr. Kuhn brings to the committee a knowledge of Hebrew and a strong interest in doctrine. He says his first real interest in the Work after conversion was doctrine. He feels his academic background and organizational and methodological interests are helpful contributions to the committee.

He says his hobby is his work.

Raymond Franklin McNair, 45, long-time evangelist and former deputy chancellor of the Ambassador College campus at Brickwood, England, is a senior editor for both The Good News and the Plain Truth and works with the Church Administration Division in coordinating ministers' questions with the latest research of the committee.

Mr. McNair entered Ambassador College in 1948, the second year of the college, (See "WV" INTERVIEWS, page 10) and received his bachelor-of-arts degree in theology in 1953. Ten years later he was awarded an M.A. degree in theology, also from Ambassador.

During his 27 years with the Work he has traveled extensively, written many articles for college and church publications, pastored "nine or 10" churches and done "considerable research in theology and history."

His travels have taken him around the world three times. He toured extensively in the Middle East on many occasions, visited every European country except Poland and the Soviet Union and once conducted a baptizing tour through Africa.

Mr. McNair and his family lived in England for 15 years, while he served as regional Plain Truth editor and director of church administration in addition to his college responsibility.

ties. While at the college in England he taught Church History, Systematic Theology and Old Testament Survey and other classes.

He has been an evangelist for 22 years and was one of a group of seven men originally ordained to that responsibility in 1953. He has worked with Herbert W. Armstrong on numerous occasions and feels that this contact is a help in his committee responsibilities.

In 1955 he married Leona Ganshous of Regina, Sask. They have three children: Ruth Angelyn, 18; Bruce David, 16; and Raymond Joseph, 14. His sons were born in England.

Under hobbies and special interests Mr. McNair lists hiking, wide-interest reading, travel, gardening, research writing, swimming, hunting and fishing.

Coloring contest

CHANCES TO WIN INCREASED

"The Worldwide News" is changing the number of age-groups in the coloring contest that was announced in the June 23 issue. Three age-groups were designated at that time: 5 and under, 6 and 7, and 8 and 9.

However, because of the 420 responses through July 17 and because of the differences in ability of each age, the WN is expanding the number of age-groups to six. Age-groups (as of Aug. 1) will now be 4 and under, 5, 6, 7, 8, and 9.

With this change, each contestant's chances of winning are substantially increased.

Prizes will be the same for each classification, including $15 cash, a $5.95 copy of The Boy Who Sailed Around the World Alone and a box of 72 crayons. For contest rules and entry blank, see the June 23 issue.

Winners will be announced in the Aug. 18 issue of The Worldwide News.

Letters TO THE EDITOR

onies united themselves together to write and adopt the document declaring their independence as a united group (of independent, sovereign states, of course).

I would conclude that the statement of the actual formation of the United States on March 4, 1789, by Mr. Dunkin is questionable on the grounds of from which point one considers our actual beginning to be: Independence Day, July 4, 1776, with the Articles of Confederation as embodying governmental documentary (it is recognized as our first constitution — see article above) approved by the Continental Congress OR the proclamation of the Constitution (as we know its faint and sad resemblance today) by the Constitutional Congress on Sept. 13, 1788, and the subsequent convening of the United States of America on March 4, 1789.

Thank you for a fine publication in the WN. I enjoy receiving each issue. Delving into American history never hurt anyone!

William Moore, explained the goals of the club as follows:

- To provide a range of educational activities beyond the scope of home and school, financed by club fund-raising projects.

- To develop leadership through the attitude of service as explained by Jesus.

- To help develop maturity, responsibility and character.

To help attain these goals, a series of achievement projects similar to scouting's merit-badge program is planned.

The planning session, held in the pastor's backyard, also laid the groundwork for the selection of club officers and a club name (Future Ambassadors seems to be the most popular) and organization of several outings for this summer, such as a white-water raft trip down New River, flying lessons and ground school, and a spelunking expedition to Monroe County, W. TEMORA, Australia — Two lambs roasting on spits over an open fire greeted the 45 members of the Sydney church who accepted the invitation of the Temora church for a back-to-the-country weekend at the Narraburra farm of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Heinrich.

The party opened with a steak barbecue and dance at the Narraburra Shire Hall after Sabbath services.

Later the men spent a freezing night wrapped up in blankets on the floor of Mr. Heinrich's shearing shed while the ladies were scattered about the floors of the farmhouse.

Sunday was a full day with softball, table tennis and other games in the morning, then a lunch of hamburgers, baked beans and salads and desserts prepared by the Temora ladies.

Organizer Fred Mancy and Peter Valusiak tended the spits. They began their long job early so that after the afternoon's softball game two beautifully roasted and tender lambs could be carved for the evening meal. Fred Mancy.

Table-Tennis Tourney

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — Danie Erasmus, a member here, manages the Mandeville Sports Center, a club for paraplegics. Mr. Erasmus, who is also confined to a wheelchair, has won many gold medals at international sports events for paraplegics.

Recently he suggested that the Johannesburg office of the Work put up a mixed team to play a table-tennis tournament against his club. The invitation was accepted and a date was set for May 28.

The office team was Robert Fahey, regional director; Peter Hawkins, Frank Nelte, Erna Barnard, Nanette du Rand and Heather Young.

Arriving at the club shortly after 7 p.m., the club members were warming up.

Many of the games were closely contested and some were won by the Mandeville club, but the office staffers won most of the games.

The interesting thing about the entire evening was seeing a fine example of true sportsmanship. There were no grumbles or complaints about difficult shots that an able-bodied person could easily have returned. Frank Nelte.

Bristol Spokesmen

BRISTOL, England — The Spokesman Club here met June 11 to treat its ladies to the final club of its first year.

Toastmaster Les Buckley, a Bricket Wood Spokesman Club graduate, set the theme as he explained the speech assignments.

First to speak was Colin David on women's lib. Ivor Fletcher followed with a stir-to-action speech on watching world news. Then Derrick Millman delivered a speech called "Things We Need to Be Aware of and Also Should Beware Of." To round off the speeches John Shottliffe tackled an impromptu on the generation gap.

Allan Bates graduated. He also was chosen the most helpful evaluator for the evening.

Mixing Dinner

CUPERTINO, Calif. — The Cupertino church had a social that started after Sabbath services May 31 with a dinner and ended with a talent show.

To promote closer relationships within the church, members instigated a so-called mixing dinner.

This required a sign-up list for those who wanted to have guests to their home for dinner and a sign-up list for those who wanted to be guests in someone's home.

The names of those who wanted to be guests were put into a hat, drawn and assigned to those who wanted to have guests. The result was that practically everyone had dinner with someone he had never eaten with before.

After dinner all returned for the talent show, which consisted of 23 acts. Participants were from 6 to 88. John Jester was the emcee.

The acts included a piano duet and solo; singing (solo and group); dancing; saxophone solo; a guitarist; acrobatics; a ventriloquist; various skits; the Amazing Jose (a magician); a recital by Mrs. Sally Reed, age 88; impersonations by Mrs. Alice An-

AC sponsors boys' basketball camp

By John Zahody

PASADENA — An Ambassador College-sponsored boys' basketball camp was held here June 22 to 27. Fifty-two boys 10 to 18 years of age came from church areas in California, Arizona and Nevada.

Jim Petty, the college's athletic director and basketball coach, planned and directed the program with the help of assistant coaches Gil Norman and Harry Snider.

College basketball players Andrew Foster and Rick Guthy, together with 1975 graduate Mario Seiglie (now a ministerial trainee with the headquarters Spanish-speaking church), assisted the coaching staff and served as camp counselors.

During their stay here out-of-town students lived in dormitories on campus and ate their meals in the college dining hall.

"We wanted to instruct the boys in proper basketball fundamentals and give them the chance to be together with young boys from other church areas," Mr. Petty said. "And we wanted to give them an opportunity to see Ambassador College."

The daily training schedule included lectures, films, drills and practice games.

Mr. Petty was enthusiastic about the camp. "Even the casual observer would be noticeably impressed" by the improvement in the boys' playing skills, he said.

Summer youth program aims to increase child's potential

By John Zahody

PASADENA — Summer means fun and the chance to develop physical skills for some 75 youngsters ages 5 to 12 who are enrolled in a summer said. "We especially try to help those who haven't swum before and give them all a chance to enjoy the water."

For ballet and tumbling instruction

SUMMER RECREATION PROGRAM — Bill Damm, aquatics instructor, guides one of some 75 children ages 5 to 12 who are now enrolled in a summer recreation program on the Pasadena campus. The program's goal is to teach children the fundamentals of swimming, gymnastics and ballet.

recreation program on this Ambassador College campus. The program began June 30 and will last through July 25.

The children meet in the Physical Education Building for three hours each weekday afternoon. They are divided by ages into three groups that rotate through the available activities.

Gil Norman, physical-education instructor at the college, planned the program and now coordinates it.

"It's a service program," he said. "Our goal is to give the children fundamental skills in swimming, gymnastics and ballet."

Aquatics instructor Bill Damm supervises the swimming. Jeanne Kloster, a physical-education major at California State University, Los Angeles, assists him.

"The program is one of both recreation and instruction," Mr. Damm

Mr. Norman hired two girls, Kerry Campbell and Becky Wilson, from Ambassador's Pasadena Flairs gymnastics team.

"They're both accomplished gymnasts and have experience teaching tumbling and dance in recreation programs," Mr. Norman said.

"We also have volunteer help from some of the mothers and from Rich Gross, a graduate student in special education at Cal State, Los Angeles."

To vary the program Mr. Gross teaches "parachute play."

The activity has nothing to do with parachuting; games are played with a single parachute (minus its rigging) held by the children as they stand in a circle around it.

Mr. Norman said he wants to "give the children basic physical instruction at an early age so that their potential will be enhanced for life."

'More power to the weight lifters'

By Brian Knowles

'Good News' Managing Editor
PASADENA — For several years, on the Ambassador College campus here, a highly successful weight-training program has been developing under the tutelage of Harry Snider. The campus is now equipped with a Universal gym (an exercise machine) in a building that houses handball courts. And a large weight room is located in a men's dormitory.

Mr. Snider's weight-training club now has more than 70 members. He stresses a balanced program of running combined with weight training. And he emphasizes the need for thorough cardiovascular development, coordination and speed, as opposed to the big-muscle concept.

Mr. Snider seeks to inspire his students with a program of guest speakers that so far has included two Messrs. Universe (Arnold Schwarzenegger and Franco Columbu).

Power Lifter Visits AC

Mr. Shaw's power-lifting records include a 510-pound bench press, a 650-pound squat and a 660-pound dead lift. His goal is to make 700 pounds in the squat and 600 in the bench press.

Strength Saves Life

Weighing between 250 and 270 pounds, Dave Shaw carries little fat. He feels that above-average strength is necessary in a violent society, especially in his line of work.

"My strength has saved my life on more than one occasion," he claims. "If it weren't for that, I don't think I'd be here right now."

Mr. Shaw says he strives to set an example of dedication and perseverance in physical achievement. He constantly pushes himself, training up to six times weekly.

Harry Snider hopes Mr. Shaw will return sometime to further encourage the weight-training club.

Meanwhile, the club is involved in an intense self-improvement program that is already producing results. More power to the weight lifters.

THE OFFICIAL GRAPEVINE

BIG SANDY — The Church-owned tent used in the past for Feast of Tabernacles meetings at Penticton, B.C., which was recently leased by and erected for a Las Vegas, Nev.-based firm, Big Top Enterprises ("Grapevine," June 23), was severely damaged by high winds and rain July 3.

According to Festival director Bill McDowell, the tent's moorings were cut as the storm hit to prevent it from becoming "Nevada's biggest kite." The storm, with wind gusts reaching 100 miles an hour, was the same storm that caused widespread flooding and damage to Las Vegas, 25 miles north of the Jean, Nev., tent site.

Mr. McDowell said the tent is now in Los Angeles, Calif., for an appraisal of repair costs for insurance purposes.

PASADENA — The Church Administration Division announced the recent ordination of three local elders and one preaching elder.

Ordained local elders were Dan Brockman of London, Ky.; Larry Millard of Denver, Colo.; and Dave Havis of Omaha, Neb. Mr. Brockman and Mr. Millard are not employed by the Work. Mr. Havis is employed by the Work.

Raised in rank was Ted Phillips, preaching elder in Gadsden, Ala.

BIG SANDY — Bill McDowell, director of the Festival Office here, his wife Rose and Church member Clara Sultzberger of Chicago, Ill., purchased a health ranch in Southern California.

ranch. The McDowells and their three sons are now living in a house trailer on the 103-acre health resort, which is a 2½-hour drive from the Pasadena campus of Ambassador College.

Mr. McDowell, who previously lived four miles east of the Ambassador campus here, said his family's move has had little effect on his Festival responsibilities.

"Travel is such an integral part of my job and I end up spending so much time traveling that our moving to California hasn't been that much of a change," he said.

The Festival director said the purchase of the health ranch has provided a "tremendous outlet and lift" for his wife, who for most of her life has had a special interest in nutrition and health.

JIM STARK

BIG SANDY — Dr. Jim Stark, professor of business and economics at Ambassador's Pasadena campus and college management consultant, was here at the invitation of Executive Vice President Ronald Dart several days this month to look over the operation of this campus and make suggestions to improve it.

"Mr. Dart asked me to come down to look over the operation and give helpful advice," Dr. Stark said.

"The college is a virtual gold mine," he said. "The campus has been developed nicely by a lot of hard-working people and has great potential. But like any business it could use a little fine tuning."

He said students should receive practical experience in the areas they are studying as well as classroom instruction. He calls this the "practical approach to education."

He feels that many schools don't combine "both the practical approach with the classroom" as Ambassador does.
