

Rostropovich concert success for local AICF

By Dave Haver
MILWAUKEE, Wis. — Mstislav Rostropovich, the 49-year-old Soviet-born cellist who was allowed to leave the U.S.S.R. three years ago, performed before a capacity crowd at a concert sponsored by the Ambassador International Cultural Foundation here Feb. 8.

"It was a fantastic concert," commented Herbert W. Armstrong, who was among the estimated 2,000 people in the audience. "They heard the best in the world."

Mr. Armstrong, founder and chairman of the AICF, and Stanley Rader, the foundation's executive vice president, traveled here for the inaugural performance of the first concert series sponsored by a local chapter of the AICF. Mr. Rostropovich, with piano accompanist Samuel Sanders, performed works of Handel, Weber, Brahms and Rachmaninoff in Milwaukee's Performing Arts Center.

The Milwaukee chapter of the AICF, formed in December of 1975, had already served the city with projects for the elderly, blind and underprivileged.

Sheltered Solzhenitsyn

Launching the music series was the man who has been called the world's best cellist, a man who for four years sheltered dissident Soviet writer Aleksandr Solzhenitsyn in his Moscow home. (In retaliating, the Soviet government reportedly banned travel by Mr. Rostropovich for three years.)

In describing the concert, Mr. Armstrong said Mr. Rostropovich (See ROSTROPOVICH, page 8)

30,000 kids see play in Auditorium

PASADENA — Some 30,000 students from grades one through eight from Los Angeles-area public and private schools saw Heidi, the play by June Walker Rogers, in twice-daily performances Jan. 19 to Feb. 4 sponsored by Ambassador College in conjunction with its Music and Art Department.

The play, adapted from the novel by 19th-century Swiss author Johanna Spyri, was produced by Wayne Shilkret, general manager of performing arts for the Ambassador International Cultural Foundation; Ellis LaRavia, manager of the Ambassador Auditorium (the site of the production); and Teri Solomon, producer of a Milwaukee, Wis., children's theater company.

The performances, which were the idea of Mr. Shilkret, were during school hours and featured a profes-

IN MILWAUKEE — Herbert W. Armstrong addresses a combined-church service in Milwaukee, Wis., Feb. 5.

TORONTO, Ont. — Garner Ted Armstrong traveled to Toronto to speak twice, Feb. 12 and 13, to campaign crowds of 2,518 and 2,458 (1,100 and 1,350 nonmembers) and while here addressed a combined Church congregation of 2,250 the Sabbath of Feb. 12 and was to open a three-day conference of Canadian ministers before heading back to Pasadena.

According to personal-appearance director Sherwin McMichael, Mr.

Armstrong in his first campaign sermon spoke on Matthew 24 and the end of the age, noting that world events are leading to the return of Jesus Christ.

In his second sermon, on Sunday, entitled "Who Is Boss?", Mr. Armstrong explained that God is the Creator and Ruler and will soon return. Mr. McMichael said both sermons emphasized "the end of the age." Both campaign sermons were delivered in the Grand Ballroom of Toronto's Sheraton Centre Hotel.

According to Budde Marino of the Big Sandy-based Personal Appearance Department, "Mr. Armstrong had not had a campaign in Canada for some time, and had not had any previous exposure in Toronto," so took the opportunity to hold the campaign.

Time Test

Mr. Armstrong's campaigns have usually run for two or three consecutive evenings, but this time the first was Saturday night at 8 o'clock and the second Sunday afternoon at 1:30.

"This is a little test that we're conducting to see what kind of response we get on Sunday afternoon," Mr. Marino said.

The nonspeaking portion of Mr. Armstrong's appearances usually features singers and instrumentalists from Ambassador College. This time 27 students, from both Ambassador campuses, made up the campaign

'Quest/77' in the mail

PASADENA — Vol. 1, No. 1, of Quest/77 is in the mail, and as of press time some charter subscribers to the Ambassador International Cultural Foundation's new magazine had already received their copies.

Since the concept of the publication was announced by Herbert W. Armstrong in 1975 (The Worldwide News, June 9, 1975), a "rehearsal issue" was mailed to charter subscribers, its name was changed, from Human Potential, and a new editorial staff, headed by editor Robert Shnayerson, formerly editor in chief of Harper's Magazine, was acquired (The Worldwide News, Aug. 30, 1976).

The March-April issue of Quest (at left) begins a bimonthly publication selling for $2 a copy or a special charter-subscription price of $9 ($10 outside the United States). Published by the Pasadena-based AICF, it has editorial offices in New York City, a subscription department in Greenwich, Conn., and distribution offices in Philadelphia, Pa. Quest is printed in Glasgow, Ky.

A Personal Letter from

Garner Ted Armstrong

Dear brethren in Christ:

GREETINGS from Toronto! I am in my hotel room at the moment, following a brief talk and question-and-answer session plus special music with the brethren here at the Sheraton Centre Hotel. I am appearing tonight for the first of our two-part campaign at 8 o'clock together with our group from both Pasadena and Big Sandy.

We had over 2,000 brethren packed into the hall for afternoon services (Mr. Leslie McCullough, director of the International Division, is the speaker this afternoon) and are expecting a turn-away crowd tonight (capacity somewhere over 2,500) but are anticipating giving out tickets for preferential seating on Sunday afternoon.

We came here yesterday after a very busy week at headquarters that included recording some more of the five-minute radio programs, plus our one-minute television spots.

World-Renowned Personalities

I was very honored to be able to meet some world-renowned personalities this last week. Beverly Sills, internationally known soprano, appeared under the auspices of our AICF concert series in the Ambassador Auditorium, and I was privileged to meet both Miss Sills and her husband and daughter following the concert at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Robert Kuhn.

At a dinner, written up in three of the major Los Angeles newspapers, I was also able to meet General of the Army Omar Bradley and his wife; the president of the Ralph M. Parsons Co., a multinational firm; actress Rhonda Fleming; producer Ted Mann; and a number of others. It was very interesting for my wife and me to be seated alongside Gen. Bradley

Letters TO THE EDITOR

Heart pulsation

Thanks to the WN for all its splendid writers, who feed the readers with inspiration. Plus well-seasoned humor, creating a rhythmic increase of heart pulsation — yes, in a lady of 90 years.

From the first

Thank you for the stories for young readers. Our son, Jimmy, wants them read over and over, so we have put them in a loose-leaf notebook for him.

We have received the WN from the first issue and appreciate it very much. We read it all but especially like Mr. Ted Armstrong's personal column. There seems to be something for everyone, and the WN has become very important to us. We are able to read about the latest developments in the Work as well as keep up on activities in other church areas where we have lived.

We feel the WN helps lift us out of our local setting and makes us continually realize how much we are really a part of a worldwide Church.

Thank you seems inadequate, but we wanted you to know we consider the WN one of the best things in our life.

Harry and Linda Coble

Addresses in obituaries

The WN is a superior publication, each issue being a "gold mine" in helping me keep my ever-growing prayer list up to date. A specific example is the "Obituaries" section. Since its inception I have prayed for each family, but now I would like very much to carry it one step further by writing a personal note of sympathy to each family. May I respectfully suggest that each obituary include the complete mailing address of the family?

When my own beloved husband died the WN carried his picture with the write-up, and because our complete mailing address was included I heard from many, many brethren who knew only that I had moved from my home state "to someplace in Chattanooga." I would like to thank you for making it possible for these Church members, whom I had not seen in six years, to extend their love and sympathy during my time of sorrow.

Mrs. Margaret K. Jones
Chattanooga, Tenn.

The WN is happy to print addresses in obituaries when they are included by the writers who send them in. However, we realize that some people may prefer not to have their addresses included.

Year's end

How exciting and how nostalgic it was to read through The Worldwide News 1976 special, month by month!

What memories it brought back of events, in so many areas, that we had lived through, prayed for and finally saw fulfilled!

Grateful thanks to all those who worked so hard to produce this wonderful 1976 special, which I think is a great improvement over the 1975 issue.

Thanks expressed

I am extremely grateful for The Worldwide News you send to me every month. Although I do not know how to express my thanks to you, but, all I am saying is for the Good Lord to bless good works.

Please, I do like you to keep sending me the newspaper, even though I am not financially able to send anything to you. May the Almighty bless and protect you in your endeavor to let the good news reach us poor folks over here in Africa. I did also like to be having The Good News magazine. You see, many Africans now are turning from paganism to Christianity.

Ready to scream

In The Worldwide News, Monday, Nov. 8, 1976, you had a story called "Escape." Mom read it in a way that we were ready to scream when she said "to be continued next issue." I don't see it in the Monday, Dec. 20, issue.

Functional part

First, The Worldwide News is a superb paper filled with lucid tidbits of valuable information for the entire brethren. Please continue to tell us of the worldwide events of members in other lands.

It's quite invigorating for me, a new member, to realize that others in foreign lands have problems that are worked out because of close, cooperative action on the part of fellow brethren within their area. It's really great to hear and see these events unfold.

The best sections for me are Garner Ted's personal letter, the personalities and the biblical word search by Bobby Whispey (Jan. 17); please, please have more of these! It's great fun and it helps to become familiar with biblical

Active being

Sir, when I read the "Transplantee" [article] re Dannie Greyling and Brenda, his lovely wife [Jan. 17], knowing them personally so well, I thought I could also add a little color to this wonderful Worldwide News letter which brings us from far away countries so close to one another! God's people are so different and outstanding to the rest of the world. And through getting to know what is being done in so many different parts of the world by God's people is so refreshing and binding together, becoming at one with God our Creator!

I am 83, a very active being. I do all my sewing myself, dresses and everything. I crochet many dresses and costumes, fancywork too. I made 12 teeshooters and 3½ dozen baby booties, four pinafores for a sewing class here in Queenshaven at an "home" for the aged ... Yet I could never have done so if God did not heal me in many instances. Outstanding is, I became blind in one eye over a period of eight days. In a miracle after anointing, within three days while I was sitting in Sabbath service my sight suddenly came back! I cried with joy and thankfulness to God! Great Church! Let us therefore live up to it, brethren.

More on temperature

I refer to your rejoinder to Larry Sharp's letter, "C. Wayne Hot," in the Jan. 3, 1977, issue of The Worldwide News. Your reply contains certain inaccuracies.

The centigrade and the Celsius scales are not "one and the same." In 1960 the General Conference of Weights and Measures altered the defining fixed point from the ice point to the triple point of water. The triple point is that point at which the three phases of water (i.e., ice, water and steam) can coexist under conditions of equilibrium. Under the authorized definition, the interval between the triple point of water and steam on the centigrade scale becomes 99.99 degrees, instead of 100 degrees. The word "centigrade" is thus a misnomer, and the word "Celsius" substitutes it accordingly. The symbol "C" is standardized in all international scientific proceedings and stands for Celsius, not centigrade.

sional cast headed by Barbara Mallory in the title role and Philip Baker Hall as the grandfather. Miss Mallory has appeared on national television in Marcus Welby, M.D., Room 222, Love Story and Movie of the Week. Mr. Hall, a performer in many Broadway productions, has been seen on the television shows Good Times, Emergency, Camera Three, The Defenders and Movie of the Week.

The students were bused from their schools for the performances, which ran two a day, four days a week, with Ambassador assisting in some cases with the transportation. Most students were charged $1 apiece for the one-hour production, but some were given free tickets.

One performance, the afternoon of Jan. 30, was open to the public.

Heidi is about a girl sent to live on a mountaintop in Switzerland with her curmudgeonly grandfather. Her charm eventually mellows the old man, but, unexpectedly, she is spirited away by an aunt to Frankfurt to live as a companion to Clara, a sickly child in a wealthy household. The play revolves around Heidi's eventual return to the mountain and her grandfather.

The production, directed by Mark Schoenberg, who was director of the Broadway productions of All the King's Men and Here Come the Clowns, was well received, Mr. Shilkret said.

"The production of Heidi was outstanding," commented Anna Robinson, who brought a class of third graders from Carden of Foothills, a private school. "On behalf of all children, teachers and mothers attending, I would like to express our thanks."

Mr. Shilkret said thank-you letters from the students "have poured in at a furious rate. Some of them are really quite humorous."

"One letter thanked us for the invitation to see Heidi and the Auditorium, even though she said that she goes there all the time. Then, writing in slightly smaller print, she said, 'I'm one of the Worldwide Church of God.'"

Mr. Shilkret credited other groups who contributed financially to the production, including the Ralph M. Parsons Co., the Exchange Club of Pasadena, VSI Corp. Aerospace Group, Farm Fresh Distributors, R.R. Donnelley & Sons Co., Rusnak

Porsche-Audi and parent-teacher groups.

The Auditorium staff was prepared for the students, who were of different ages and backgrounds, said Mr. LaRavia, manager of the building. The youths were well behaved, he said, and were as interested in the Auditorium as they were the stage production.

"The children come in with heads bent backward, trying to view everything," Mr. LaRavia said. "They consider the chandelier [in the lobby] everything from a weapon to a thing of costly beauty. Some have asked, 'Will the chandelier withstand an earthquake?' This comes from first and second graders."

"Others have said, 'Wow, that must cost $100!'"

Youngsters commented on other features of the Auditorium too, Mr. LaRavia said.

"One effervescent little second grader stated, 'I have never seen anything like that. What makes that automatic toilet work?'"

SEP: roughing it in South Africa

CEDARA, South Africa — One hundred three teenagers from South Africa and Rhodesia participated in a Summer Educational Program here, in the province of Natal, Dec. 20 to Jan. 4.

"These kids are doing things at SEP that I wished I could have done at age 13 or 14," commented overall SEP supervisor Andre van Belkum, who said he was also speaking for most of the adults present.

The program included archery, canoeing, horseback riding, sailing, squash, skeet and trap shooting, soccer, swimming, volleyball, tennis, a cross-country race, a grueling obstacle course and a strenuous hike.

"Boy's clubs proved very popular," Mr. van Belkum said. "The clubs were similar to the Spokesman Club format, and the staff were amazed at the performance of the children, especially the spontaneity and frankness with which they expressed opinions and ideas."

Water sports were held at nearby Midmar Dam, inside Midmar Game Reserve. White rhinos, zebras, blue and black wildebeests (gnu) and several varieties of buck inhabit the reserve, "which everyone was able to view at close range either from the back of a truck or while horse riding or canoeing," Mr. van Belkum said.

16 Miles in Canoes

A grueling but exciting activity was a 16-mile canoe trip. First the campers received basic instruction on how to handle a canoe.

"Balancing yourself is the most difficult part," according to Mr. van Belkum. "Yet, after a few hours of shrieks and splashes as kids tumbled out of their canoes, they developed sufficient proficiency to proceed on an extended overnight trip."

The camp supervisor talked of the typical 16-mile canoe trip:

"With reasonable weather the trip would last five to six hours. After arriving at their destination the canoeists would set up camp for the night. There would be chatter about who managed the entire trip without capsizing and who held the record for the most capsizes. That night a few found the ground too hard to sleep soundly."

SEP campers had an opportunity during the 16 days of the program to learn to water-ski from a champion, the South African holder of the 50- and 100-kilometer waterskiing world speed records, Derick Levy, who provided free instruction.

"He used a unique and very effective method of allowing the youngsters to hold onto a metal bar which protruded from the inside of the boat," Mr. van Belkum said. "This enabled Derick to stand in his craft and instruct the skiers regarding proper skiing techniques. After developing confidence the youngsters then progressed to the tow rope. By the end of the camp virtually everyone could glide over the water with reasonable proficiency. "It was not as difficult as I imagined," was a comment often expressed."

Two-Day Hike

A favorite with the campers each year is the 25-mile overnight hike. Mr. van Belkum said. This year's trail leader for the boys was Louis Bouwer, from near Johannesburg. The girls were taken on a slightly shorter, daytime hike by John White, pastor of the East London church.

"Louis Bouwer's aim was to make the two-day journey pleasant, but also a real challenge," Mr. van Belkum commented. "He took the four boys' patrols individually during the two weeks and each party faced different conditions and experiences. Groups trudged through rainstorms, and others sweltered in the summer heat. No journey was the same for Uncle Louis."

"Part of the excitement of the hike are the unpredictable experiences, weather or otherwise. One group marshaled together to carry a patrol member through the dark for emergency treatment. He had been bitten by a snake or scorpion at dusk, and without the united effort of the team and God's intervention would probably now be dead." (See related article, page 7.)

In teaching sailing, the staff used four rented yachts and trained a greater number of skippers and crews than in years past.

"The climax of the sailing activities was a most enjoyable regatta," Mr. van Belkum stated, "with some expert handling around the marker buoys and some hilarious

Tightly planned program

Volunteers staff Australian SEP

By Bruce Dean

BURLEIGH HEADS, Australia — The fifth annual Summer Educational Program for the Queensland area began Dec. 23 for 85 young people who traveled to Warwick, a 3½ hours' drive southwest of Brisbane. The campers used the National Fitness Council camp, alongside Leslie Dam, as a site for the nine-day SEP. The dam provides both a lake and small river for water sports.

SEP each year has been organized by Tom Burchard, a Toowoomba local elder, who with his wife has modeled the camp after those in Orr, Minn., and Scotland. This year a team from Brisbane helped plan and run SEP to take some of the pressure off Mr. and Mrs. Burchard.

The camp — which this year was divided into 10 units of eight or nine campers each — has been staffed over the years entirely by volunteers. Dormitory and activity supervisors give of their time and even pay for the privilege of doing so. Much of the food is donated by Church members, and all equipment is lent to the camp.

The first day it rained, but the supervisors decided to go ahead with the tightly planned program. Within 20 minutes the weather had cleared, and the remainder of the camp the sun shone, except for a brief storm the last day.

Vying for E Flag

A normal day's activities began when the campers rose around 6 a.m. Before breakfast they did their chores, played in the gym and cleaned their dorms, vying for the E Flag for that day. After a parade and presentation of the E Flag came three hours of activities in the morning and another three in the afternoon. Evening activities took the youths to lights-out at 10 p.m.

Each morning three dorms traveled by car and truck to the dam for water sports. While one dorm tried to water-ski or had rides on a toboggan, another dorm sailed. A little farther along, the other dorm was trying to paddle a rubber dinghy or canoe.

Meanwhile two other dorms were working their way around the lake in what was to become the infamous day hike. Church members Barry Johnston and Bruce Fanning took the campers on this six-mile walk in extremely hot weather across rough terrain. They recovered by swimming and eating a picnic lunch. Later groups were warned about the "15-mile endurance test."

On the campgrounds another dorm rode horses, learning how to saddle, mount, ride and care for a horse. Helen Saville had set up an obstacle course and gave each camper a time trial to see how well he could handle his steed.

Pam Scott and Jeanette Dean taught screen printing this year, including how to place lettering and designs on T-shirts.

In a bush-survival course campers learned to use initiative in making a stretcher out of what they could find in the bush and out of clothing.

Another dorm was given some wood, truck tires and rope and challenged to make a river raft.

Sports Popular

Sports were again popular and included basketball, softball, touch football, cricket, gymnastics, trampolining and tennis, and a commando course was taught. Sports culminated in mini-Olympics.

Evening activities included a sing-along, barbecue, talent show and dance (to records and live music provided by Sam West).

On the Sabbath David Noller, national director of YOU in Australia, spoke of his plans for the coming year.

Sharon Ricketts, 18, of Brisbane, an ex-camper and this year a dorm supervisor, said:

"Speaking for Dorm 8, I think it was the most enjoyable and fun-filled camp the girls have been on."

Phyllida Harvard, a camper from Theodore, said:

"I really enjoyed it; it was great. I enjoyed the horses the most."

Mark de Mey, 19, a dorm supervisor from Rockhampton, thought this, his fourth camp, was "by far the best. It was a very exciting and full program."

Kiwi SEP is thrilling and spilling

By Colin Kelly

KARAPIRO, New Zealand — The fourth New Zealand Summer Educational Program began here Dec. 20 with more than 75 campers and staff members attending from around the country. Many of the SEP activities represented first-time experiences for more than half of those who attended.

The river flowing by the campsite provided excellent yachting and canoeing. In fact, a popular part of the program was an overnight canoe trip up the river to a campsite near the habitat of glowworms, clearly visible around the banks of the river.

Another unforgettable experience was a night trip through a 100-yard corridor between river banks also covered with the tiny lights of thousands of glowworms, which some say is the purest light known to man.

Other activities included sports, swimming, water ballet, candle making, confidence-course exercises, sailing, overnight camps on the slopes of a mountain, archery and riflery.

Campers took home with them memories of fireside sing-alongs, addresses of new friends to write to and tales of thrills and spills to relate to their parents.

The 10-day program provided many New Zealand teenagers with opportunities to acquire and develop skills and creativity and the chance to live a full, exciting, balanced life of social, cultural and sporting activities.

Decorating on a string

'WN' volunteer ties loose ends

By Sherry L. Marsh

BIG SANDY—Some people can find a second use for anything, and this is true of Martha Massey, a volunteer worker for The Worldwide News, who helps with several other volunteers to mail out the paper each issue.

Mrs. Massey began helping out the WN in May of last year when she moved here from Lufkin, Tex., with her daughter Sherry, one of eight children. Employees at the Ambassador College Press, where the paper is made ready for mailing, began to notice that Mrs. Massey picked up the discarded string that held bundles of papers together when they came back from the shop in Gladewater, Tex., in which the WN is printed.

The string is usually thrown away when the bundles are taken apart to affix the mailing labels. But Mrs. Massey saw another use for the string and dutifully gathered it up every other week when she came to help with the paper.

About a month ago Mrs. Massey revealed the 60-by-78-inch bedspread she had crocheted from the string she had saved.

Mrs. Massey had completed a similar project several years ago when her husband brought home tangled string that had been thrown away at his place of employment. Mrs. Massey made this into a bedspread that her youngest daughter now owns.

Mrs. Massey has been crocheting and knitting for some time and is now working on quilts out of scraps of material that she hopes to sell and make enough money for a trip this summer.

Mrs. Massey first heard The World Tomorrow on radio in 1945 and has been attending church since 1960. She has attended every Feast of Tabernacles since her first in 1958 at Big Sandy, her early Feasts made possible from money she had earned selling articles that she had crocheted and knitted.

Mrs. Massey feels fortunate to live so close to a church now, since the first church service she attended, in Odessa, Tex., was 75 miles from her home. Many of the pen pals she corresponds with, whom she met through the WN, are in the situation she was in then, she said.

"I used to be the lady that lived in the woods, and now I've switched roles," she said. "There are a lot of ladies who can't get to a church and would like to know about the Work and about the college, and I can tell them."

Kingsport YOU group: 'We've only just begun'

KINGSPORT, Tenn.—When the YOU program was launched in 1975 Kingsport had a church with about 25 teenagers. The question faced by members here, as was the case with other congregations with few young people, was, as pastor Joe Mills put it, "What can we do with a small, scattered, nonpolarized group?"

"Our first year passed with a lot of talk among the teens and a lot of thought among the ministers and adults, but very little action," Mr. Mills said. "Trying to get something going was proving to be more difficult than simply being the natural result of desire."

The turning point came last summer when several teenagers in this area said to Mr. Mills, "Let's do something!"

"The teens wanted to stop shooting the bull and start taking the bull by the horns," he said. "I told the teens we would help them and back them in every way possible, but I expected them to decide what they wanted to do and be willing to expend the effort to make ideas become accomplishments."

Swinging Into Action

The first step was to organize a "YOU club," Mr. Mills said, "both for organization and to ultimately generate a local YOU chapter to be a part of the national YOU scene. Officers were appointed, meetings conducted, and our teens were ready to swing into action."

Girls' volleyball was the first order of business. A district tournament was held in Knoxville, Tenn., Nov. 7, 1976.

"Although short on talent and even shorter on practice and experience, our girls had a positive, winning attitude," Mr. Mills commented. "They played until their hands were blue, their knees were skinned and their emotions were drained — and until they were the undefeated champions of the district."

The regional tourney, near Atlanta, Ga., didn't go as well for the Tennesseans, "but the girls still played like champs by maintaining their poise and never giving up."

After volleyball the YOU chapter here has become involved with boys' basketball and girls' cheerleading. Both groups are "somewhat young and inexperienced," but full of enthusiasm and dedication, Mr. Mills stated. "While winning may not be too important, a winning attitude is."

Fund raising with refreshment stands at YOU and adult athletic events has been successful financially and has provided a service to the brethren here. Citrus sales have been the main means of financing the local program.

"For icing on the cake and to show appreciation, our teens wanted their first major social activity to be a YOU-sponsored dance for the entire Kingsport church," said Mr. Mills. "Dec. 18 was the date for 'Let's Boogie.' The teens fulfilled and exceeded the expectations of the adults. We thoroughly enjoyed the decorations, abundant food and, yes, even the music."

Adult Backing

Mr. Mills quoted excerpts from a letter written to him by some parents and other adults of the Kingsport church:

"Please express our sincere appreciation and total enjoyment as regards the recent 'Let's Boogie' dance sponsored by our own YOU group of teens. We have a wonderful 'family' of teens, and are genuinely proud of their accomplishments, both in and out of the Church."

Adult support is important for a successful youth program, Mr. Mills feels. He credited YOU coordinators Bill and Debbie Hicks, along with Cheryl Smith, chapter president, "and all the rest of the teens, who have contributed their time, talents and energy."

The past six months "have been busy as well as rewarding," he concluded. "And, while we feel we've come a long way in a short period of time, we've only just begun."

SNOWBALLS

STORY FOR YOUNG READERS
By Kenda Turner

"Watch me knock down that icicle!"

Jan pointed toward the house as Barbara leaned down and scooped up a handful of snow. The girls were playing in the fresh snow that had fallen during the night. They had already built a snowman, and now they were trying to hit targets with snowballs.

"I'll hit that fence post," said Barbara. She cupped snow in her mitten-covered hand and threw it hard, laughing as her hat fell over her eyes. "No fair," she called. "I couldn't see!"

"Hey," said Jan, "let's have a contest. See that big tree across the road? Let's see which one of us can hit it first."

As Barbara agreed, they raced to the ditch at the edge of the road and tumbled into the snow. And they began throwing snowballs. One, two, three, even four snowballs each, but neither girl could hit the tree. Barbara decided to quit.

"This is no fun after all," she said as she stood up.

"Wait, Barb, I've got another idea. When the next car goes by, let's see if we can throw a snowball over it. Okay?"

"Okay," agreed Barbara.

The girls made a pile of snowballs and waited for a car to pass.

Jan tilted her head. "Listen," she said, "I think I hear a car coming. Get ready."

A blue station wagon came into view. As it passed them, Jan threw her snowball, aiming above the roof of the car.

But, instead of going over, the snowball smacked right into the side of the car!

Jan's eyes widened, and she gasped in surprise. Barbara muttered, "Whoops."

Then the car stopped.

"Oh, no," said Jan. "What is he going to do?"

A man was getting out of the station wagon. Jan thought he looked angry.

"Run!" she yelled. "Oh, Barbara, run. He's mad at us. Oh, no." Both girls darted toward their homes.

Jan ran so fast she almost stumbled in the snow. She reached her back door and bolted in, then scrambled down the basement steps. With her heart pounding, she crouched beside the washing machine.

She waited. "What if he comes down here and finds me? What should I do?" She wouldn't let herself move, even to scratch her nose.

Then there was noise at the top of the stairs. Footsteps. Someone was coming down.

Jan held her breath and closed her eyes. She hoped whoever it was would not find her. But the sound of footsteps continued, coming closer to her hiding place.

"Jan."

She had been found.

Dangerous Game

Opening her eyes, she saw her mother standing in front of her.

With great relief, Jan said, "Oh, Mother, I am so glad it's you. I'm sorry. I didn't mean to do anything wrong."

"Jan," answered her mother, "everything is going to be all right. I know what happened." She then began explaining that the man had stopped to talk to her and that he was unhappy with the girls, but not mad at them.

"He wanted me to be sure to tell you that your game could be dangerous by distracting a driver. He doesn't want anyone to get hurt."

"It isn't a very good game," Jan said. "I won't do it any more."

Then, with arms around each other, Jan and her mother walked up the stairs.

Jan stopped at the back door. "I think I'll go out and find Barbara," she said. "We'll find something better to do now." She smiled. "Maybe we'll shovel the sidewalks."

Her mother hugged her. "That's a good idea," she said.

So Jan went back outside. The snow sparkled before her. She saw the shovel. "There's work to be done," she whispered as she picked it up.

Youth within minutes of death

By Peter Hawkins

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — What would you do if suddenly somebody's life were dropped into your hands? At the 1976 Summer Educational Program in Cedara, in the province of Natal, we discovered anything is possible.

The morning of Dec. 26 we started our 25-mile hike with no suspicion of what awaited us. The sky was blue, and high cirrus clouds offered protection against the scorching summer sun. We knew dangerous snakes were in the area and the occasional poisonous spider, sometimes even a scorpion or two. But most snakes slink away at the sound of footsteps and have long since disappeared by the time hikers pass their resting place.

Besides, what could happen to us? We found out.

It Happened

The day had been strenuous. We hauled our backpacks up and down rocky slopes, stopping occasionally both for breath and breathtaking views. We set up camp at 4 p.m. at the halfway mark, quickly seeing to it that grub was cooking over the crackling fire.

At 7 p.m. came dusk, and many of the patrol had already eaten. Camper Lionel van Graan went to pick up a friend's plate, and then it happened! Two small pinpricks of blood on one finger revealed the bite; whatever was responsible disappeared without a trace.

Dusk hid many things in its shadows. Within 10 minutes hike leader Louis Bouwer knew quick action was needed. Shots of pain thrust their way up Lionel's arm, and he began to lose consciousness. We knelt and asked God's protection on the 17-year-old's life while we did all we could to help. The nearest farm was several miles along a winding mountain road, preceded by several hundred yards of wild terrain. We knew there wasn't any time to waste. Louis and I took off.

The first mile was bearable, but later it was mentally agonizing to force feet faster when they felt like lead. ... someone's life depended on that message to Garcia.

Forty minutes and several pints of sweat later, we reached the farm. The farm manager kindly loaned us his pickup truck, and he and Louis charged down the slope to a point nearest the camp. In the meantime members of our patrol had been nursing the now unconscious and shallow-breathing young man. Forming a six-man moving stretcher, they swept through the brush and around boulders. As one fell, another would take his place, steadying the human ambulance as it moved along.

Follow That Cloud

At the farm I had phoned for a minister, requesting him to be ready at the surgery when Lionel arrived. The pickup rocketed past the farmhouse entrance, heading for Howick, where a doctor was waiting. I followed the cloud of dust in a Volkswagen and arrived a little later at the waiting room. Patrol members anxiously stood awaiting news.

John White, pastor of the East London church, anointed the teenager before a speechless doctor. Shallow breathing and dilated pupils caused the doctor concern as he injected cortisone into the hiker's arm.

"Ten minutes later and he could have been dead," retorted the doctor.

It was now 8:30 p.m., an hour and a half since the bite. He was still in danger, but we had the added assurance of God's help. What's more, the rest of the SEP students at Cedara had already heard of the incident and had prayed for Lionel.

After the initial treatment, the boy was rushed to the nearest hospital, in Pietermaritzburg, 20 miles away.

Thirty minutes later, at Pietermaritzburg Hospital, Lionel was strong enough to lean on one elbow and talk to us.

"I expected someone in far worse condition," the doctor said.

examples of backward sailing."

Other Activities

Other features of SEP were a discussion on hunting by conservationist Ian Player (brother of golfer Gary); a display of shotguns and rifles by Alan King, director of a sports shop; and a demonstration of makeup and skin care for the girls by beauty consultant Di Rowan.

"The last two days were crammed with activities and competition to determine the prizewinners," Mr. van Belkum said. "Incidentally, this year we were able to award very attractive prizes to 12 students, due to the combined effort of all the members in southern Africa who raised the necessary funds."

The entire group spent the next-to-last day of camp at Midmar for tennis and squash final competitions. A picnic lunch was followed by canoe races and the sailing regatta.

The final day began at 8 a.m. on the archery range to decide the winning teams and best individual archer. Then came the finals of the obstacle course, where teamwork and initiative count.

"Bob Klynsmith's group clinched the title," Mr. van Belkum said. "The time his team took to negotiate the entire course was an outstanding 5 minutes 35 seconds."

Every student was then able to score points for his or her group by taking part in the cross-country race. Johan Oettle of Cape Town stormed across the finish line to take first place, closely followed by Mike Burt and Mark Webber.

"The next activity was a swimming gala with 13 events for boys and girls," Mr. van Belkum reported. "This was followed by the soccer finals. George Jacob's group romped away with the honors."

"That evening the presentations to those who excelled in the various activities were made."

Those Awarded

Mara Kading, Wendy Harley, Jack Jelbert, William Jelbert, Peter Marais and Thomas van Wijk won five days in the Wilderness Leadership Course (which Ian Player founded) in the Umfolozi Game Reserve.

"This prize was awarded to the teenagers we feel have most leadership potential," explained John Bartholomew, SEP director for the last three years. "The course is designed to impress upon future leaders the need for environmental care."

Judged the most talented athlete at SEP this year was 16-year-old Mark Webber, who walked off with the best-canoeist and best-boys'-squash-player awards. His brother Bruce, 15, won the prize as best archer.

The outstanding tennis players were Nerine James, 15, and Jeffery Bennett, 16, and the best girl squash player was Alison Lee, 13.

Glen Crankshaw showed excellent class during sailing and qualified for the prize to attend the Mountford Sailing School in Durban.

Bob Klynsmith and Bev Berry were the two counselors whose groups attained the highest overall competition points at SEP this year.

"SEP '76 was brought to a grand finale when on the last night each group performed a skit which proved an enjoyable highlight after the strenuous program," Mr. van Belkum stated. "John Clifford, the sailing instructor, true to form, dressed as a pirate and compered the show."

Robert Fahy, director of the African Work, traveled from Johannesburg to attend SEP for several days.

"He held a special Bible study during which the youngsters were given an opportunity to ask questions and to discuss problems they face in the society," Mr. van Belkum said. "He also took the Sabbath service and spoke on the seven laws of success, especially stressing the need to have clearly defined goals."

Second SEP for Cape

By Henri Fortuin

CAPE TOWN, South Africa — About 50 colored (mixed-race) children participated in this area's second Summer Educational Program, this year held at the Round Table service organization's holiday camp at Hout Bay, on the west coast of the Cape Peninsula, Dec. 19 to 30.

Activities included sailing, canoeing, horse riding, skin diving, swimming, sand sliding, hiking and mountain climbing, a cultural tour of Cape Town and eating. The former activities were supervised by deacon Peter van der Byl, while the last was overseen by Walter Bester, another deacon, assisted by members Violet Francis and Miriam Speckmann.

Owen Visagie, who attended to camp administration, and Angus Francis, both members here, provided camp security.

Participants were organized into eight groups — four male and four female — with Glenda Sissing, Moira Adams, Ingrid Speckmann, Carol Anne Francis, Eddie Pelston, Lawrence Boks, Loyal Piet and Henri Fortuin as group leaders. Instruction in activities was provided by Pat van der Byl and Frances Prior (horse riding), Dan Botha (skin diving), Peter van der Byl (sailing), Stan Campbell (swimming) and Patrick Bartnick (canoeing).

Apart from the progeny of members of the congregation, participants included friends and relatives, plus pupils of member and schoolteacher Eddie Pelston and nominees from the Cape Flats Distress Association, a colored community organization.

Robert Engelbrecht, 15, one of the association nominees, was presented with an award for being the outstanding SEP student. Crystal Europa and Moira Adams also received awards.

After a sermon by camp director and Cape Town pastor Dan Botha on the Sabbath, the congregation provided meat, music and company that evening at a braai (barbecue) (barbecue) for SEP. The next day members provided lunch after 3,600-foot Table Mountain was scaled by SEP staffers and participants.

Rain on the first and last days dampened the camp, but there were 12 days of ideal weather.

The final night featured a mini-Spokesman-cum-ladies' club, with creditable speeches and evaluations.

Camp has family atmosphere

By Robert L. Ainsworth

BINNINGUP, Australia — Zebras, giraffes, buffalo, bears, antelope and camels stomped all over the rolling sand hills of this part of Western Australia one summer's day in January. Teams named after these animals — made up of 56 children and seven adults from the Perth church, 90 miles from here — vied for victory in a game of capture the flag.

The game was part of the annual summer camp for youths of the Perth church, which this summer ran from Jan. 2 to 9.

Who cares about minor bruises and scratches while enjoying a seven-day camp, especially when it includes three superbly prepared meals a day?

The camp is leeward of the sand hills, only 300 yards from the beach, and is equipped to house about 60 participants. This is the third year at these facilities, which include a kitchen and large eating-recreation hall.

This year the youths, whose ages ranged from 10 to 16, were divided into six groups named after the animals mentioned at the beginning of his article.

Here's how a typical day went for the campers:

They were up at 6 a.m., ready to run half a mile up the beach and back, have a quick swim, clean up the dorms and eat breakfast. Then came archery, volleyball and other sports, an instruction class, morning tea, a swim, beach-buggy and bike rides and lunch. Next were a bus trip inland to a riverboating and swimming rendezvous, the evening meal, a beach sing-along and toasted marshmallows around a camp fire.

CAMP SITE — This complex at Binningup in Western Australia was the site of a camp for youths of the Perth church.

Enough energy had to be saved to trudge back to camp and swallow supper before retiring.

The week's activities also included a concert, a bus tour to a public-works department, the showing of Walt Disney cartoons and other activities.

A major reason for the success of this year's camp, supervisors felt, was the daily 15-minute instruction class, the aim of which was to orient campers toward biblical principles.

A further improvement resulted from the posting of each of the four adult supervisors to a separate dormitory to assist in creating a family atmosphere, helping to stabilize the excited youngsters.

At the beginning of the seven days, some had their doubts about some aspects of the program, but when all were ready to say good-bye and drive back to Perth, most were convinced that, regardless of how uncontrolled and confused the world becomes, kids will revel in discipline and organization and, in fact, thrive on it.

Rostropovich concert a success

"did not put on so many flourishes as some do to please the people, but he played the music superbly."

"Unquestionably we heard one of the world's finest musicians, probably the greatest cellist in the world," said Carl McNair, Upper-Midwest Area coordinator and pastor of the two Milwaukee churches. "The man has the magnetism of a great artist to create electricity."

Wayne Shilkret of Pasadena, general manager of the performing arts for the AICF, said the presentation was "a wonderful concert by a great musician."

The audience seemed to agree with these comments; Mstislav Rostropovich was beckoned back for two curtain calls before the intermission and four curtain calls and two encores at the program's conclusion.

After the performance was a champagne reception for the artist in a lounge of the Performing Arts Center, with 1,000 people attending, Mr. McNair said.

The remaining performances of the series will feature pianist Vladimir Ashkenazy March 17 and baritone Robert Merrill April 12.

Art Molarow, director of the AICF Extension Center, traveled here from Pasadena to observe the workings of the AICF chapter sponsoring the event.

"The real success that we had was because of the chapter people," explained Mr. Molarow. "They really put in their whole being; they became involved in a very tangible form of service which I'm sure they found very fulfilling."

Mr. McNair added, "People have worked very diligently to make this a success. The 620 AICF charter members in the Milwaukee chapter have given of their time and done a superb job as laborers for the cause."

Some of the people involved from the Greater Milwaukee Chapter were President Joe Himden, Vice President Tom Grede, secretary Bill Kaiser, treasurer Marty Lauffer and directors H.R. Buckman, Mike Hanisko, Frank Kaiser, William Kessler, Mr. McNair, Peter Ochs and Maurice Wolkmar.

Some of the Benefits

Mr. Molarow explained some of the benefits of concert series that are sponsored by AICF chapters:

"With the AICF Extension Center's cultural programs through local chapters, any excess funds above expenses go to local charitable purposes within the community where the concert is held."

Discussing the goal of the chapter he belongs to, Mr. McNair added:

"There are always unmet needs in every community. Our goal and objective in the local chapter is to help in meeting these needs. More opportunities will be available than we can possibly fill, therefore we are alert to those needs which are within the scope of our finances."

CRITIC'S CHOICE — A montage of Milwaukee publications depicts articles about the AICF-sponsored concert. Among them is a front-page story in the Journal entitled "Cellist's Sponsor Tests Market."

members from the churches in Chicago and Rockford, Ill., and Appleton and Wisconsin Dells, Wis. Small contingents of members also came from Minneapolis, Minn., and Eau Claire, Wis.

After the sermonette by Stanley Rader, executive vice president of the AICF, Mr. Armstrong outlined some of the events in getting the Church's message to the world.

Carl McNair, coordinator of the Upper-Midwest Area, said Mr. Armstrong was "very vibrant and enthusiastic about the Work of God. It is unfortunate that many of the members from eastern Chicago were not able to travel and hear his address because of the deep snow in that area."

According to George Meeker, senior pastor and the first resident pastor in Milwaukee, the "contact with Mr. Armstrong is very beneficial. Local churches can sometimes feel remote from Pasadena. But seeing Mr. Armstrong's youthful zeal is an inspiring reminder of our purpose."

Wesley Olson, deacon and member in attendance at the first Sabbath service of the church here, said Mr. Armstrong's visit to Milwaukee was the first in 20 years. "In February of 1957 he spoke to the fledgling church pastored by Dean Blackwell," Mr. Olson said.

Ministerial Dinner

Later in the evening Mr. Armstrong met with 26 ministers and their wives. Mr. McNair gave a brief introduction of Mr. Armstrong to the ministry, and during the evening Tom Grede, chairman of the local AICF concert committee, discussed the influence of the foundation in the Milwaukee area.

Mr. Armstrong and Mr. Rader fielded questions from the ministers following dinner. For 1½ hours various subjects were discussed, including insights into Mr. Armstrong's ministry, the importance and impact of the AICF and the connection of the AICF to the Church.

Senior pastor Bob Hoops said the opportunity to communicate with Mr. Armstrong was "so very important. He shared many of his thoughts and feelings. The man is singularly sincere and honest in his approach to God, to the Work of God and to people in general."

Mr. Armstrong encouraged the ministry to appreciate the privilege of being in a God sponsored, backed and blessed by God. "Go home and thank God that you are a part of this great Work which is serving humanity," he exhorted.

Televised Interview

Mr. Armstrong and Mr. Rader were televised, live, during an interview by station WTMJ-TV Feb. 4. They discussed the concert series and other projects of the foundation in different parts of the world.

Just before the Rostropovich concert, Mr. Armstrong met with Milwaukee civic leaders at a dinner in which he and Mr. Rader introduced them to the foundation and Church.

Mr. Armstrong said about 35 people attended the dinner, representing some of "the top members of the Milwaukee community."

Mr. Grede, Mr. Rader and Mr. Armstrong each spoke briefly.

"I simply said that I was so glad that there were two ways and only two ways of living, and that this world is entirely geared to the way of get," Mr. Armstrong said. "Everything we [the Work] do is the way of give and that I was so glad of that. That is the way it will ultimately become. All of our troubles are blamed on this way of get, and it is something new that we have never done before, and it is something we know is right. We are going to keep on doing it for quite a while."

Mr. Armstrong expressed appreciation for the "very fine work" done by Art Mokarow, director of the AICF Extension Center. "Mr. Mokarow did a superb job that will help me immensely, city by city, to give us the means of opening up other communities like Minneapolis . . . to the Work. We are planning campaigns there, in addition to our Work in world capitals abroad."

Mr. Armstrong said the enthusiasm he felt during the concert was much the same as he felt at the first AICF concerts in Pasadena. "If anything it was more so," Mr. Armstrong said.

chorale and band, said Marty Yale, 20, a junior student from Big Sandy.

Mr. Yale, a guitarist for the group who is also president of his class at the Texas campus, said others in the campaign troupe feel Toronto is "about the warmest church area" they have served. "The Church members here have gone out of their way for us," he said.

Mr. Yale said some of the singers and musicians also performed for patients in a Toronto veterans' hospital before the campaign.

Many parts of Canada are made to order for personal appearances by Mr. Armstrong because of extensive exposure of the Garner Ted Armstrong telecast, which appears on 175 Canadian stations.

Mr. Marino, who headed advertising for the appearance, said "mass-media advertising coverage in the Toronto area" was extensive and covered the surrounding cities as well.

"We've advertised on two radio stations in Toronto and the television station and the leading newspaper in Toronto, plus posters and transit cards [signs inside buses]."

He credited members of the Toronto churches, along with area coordinator Gary Antion, with contributing significantly to the success of the appearance.

"They [the members] were involved in fund-raising projects, and they're participating in manning the hall, ushering, some of the localized promotion. They're handling transit cards. A lot of the legwork is handled by the local church."

Weather Warmer

Mr. McMichael said the weather cooperated with plans for the campaign. Though this area had been experiencing subfreezing temperatures of late, along with much of the rest of North America, the weather warmed before Mr. Armstrong's appearance and was "the best in three months," Mr. McMichael said.

"Mr. Armstrong will open a three-day ministerial conference tomorrow morning [Feb. 14] before returning to Pasadena," Mr. McMichael stated.

Also to speak at the conference, according to Leslie McCullough, director of the International Division, were C. Wayne Cole, director of the Canadian Work; Robert Kuhn, executive vice president of the Ambassador International Cultural Foundation; Jim Thornhill, director of Youth Opportunities United; and Mr. McCullough.

A Personal Letter

and his wife and next to Beverly Sills. In the course of the evening, though wondering how the general (whose 84th birthday was Saturday, Feb. 12) would respond to questions concerning his wartime career, I ventured to ask him a few questions concerning Gen. George Patton's removal from command following the Sicilian campaign, the famous slapping incident and other experiences: (I was an impressionable teenager during those years, during World War II, and read dozens of books and historical journals, plus biographical stories — Winston Churchill's memoirs, Eisenhower's Crusade in Europe and others.)

In reference to the slapping incident which resulted in Gen. Patton's being "placed on ice" (according to Gen. Bradley) in Sicily, Gen. Bradley told me, "That private probably did more to win World War II than any other private in the Army."

Eager to Talk

I found the general not only willing but eager to talk about some of his wartime experiences, and he began relating several of the six times in which he escaped either serious injury or severe death by only the slightest margin.

I was particularly struck by the first event in which he described his feelings when the vehicle in which he was riding drove over a German land mine. For some reason the mine did not go off and the general's life was spared. He told us, "I felt right then that God wanted me to remain alive for the duration of this war and that He had some special task for me to perform."

Needless to say I was quite struck by his words and responded, "I am sure history has borne out that fact."

At any rate, it was truly an experience to meet such a stellar group of personalities all in one evening, and I was very pleased to be invited to a surprise birthday party for Gen. Bradley on the following Saturday night, only to have to send my regrets, for we had already scheduled the Toronto campaign for that Saturday night some weeks earlier.

Nevertheless, we sent the general an album of color pictures of his evening at Ambassador, including pictures of Beverly Sills and of Gen. Bradley and his wife chatting with many of the guests.

Looking Forward to Visit

We are very enthusiastically looking forward to the full-scale accreditation visit in the next few weeks.

On the last preliminary visit to go over our self-study report, Dr. Robert Thomas (Brigham Young University) and Dr. Kay Anderson (Western Association of Schools and Colleges) gave us many interesting pointers concerning the self-study report, and in subsequent exchanges of correspondence and personal telephone calls the full-scale visit was once again reconfirmed for March.

As I was telling many of the brethren here in Toronto just this afternoon, perhaps some of our brethren do not realize the tremendous progress we have made at Ambassador College in the last few years with the addition of certain of the very thoroughly credentialed and adequately staffed majors in such fields as business, data processing, computer science, mass communications and others.

For example, we are going to graduate in the neighborhood of 70 seniors this coming spring, about half of whom will be business majors.

Our major in business is of the finest quality, and, to illustrate, only the other day officials from the Bank of America were on campus recruiting some of our students for future career opportunities!

Some few have not really understood fully that Ambassador College is able to offer top-quality education in certain of the more technical fields, and offer sufficient majors in a wide-enough area to provide graduating seniors with an immediate transition into meaningful career opportunities with significant salaries.

Stopping in Chicago

I will be stopping for about an hour in the Chicago area following the Toronto campaign to meet briefly with principals in the very well-known Field Enterprises, Inc., one of the major syndicates, in discussions concerning my coming syndicated column.

When any new information breaks concerning either the columns or the book, I will keep you fully informed.

Meanwhile, we are very pleased to see that the weather here in Toronto released its icy grip, and just prior to our arrival the people here were enjoying their first above-zero weather in quite a long number of days. It is cool but fairly pleasant outside, and as a result of the somewhat milder weather we are hopeful of very large crowds at both meetings.

That's about it for now. I have sent you several letters of late, including one special letter directed more toward our so-called "inactive" members which is quite strong, plus another, shorter, one concerning the coming Holy Day seasons, containing your Holy Day-offering envelopes!

My father is leaving on another overseas trip very shortly, and of course as always I will keep you informed, both in the "Personal" and via the other pages of The Worldwide News. I'm sure my father will be writing concerning his activities in his own "Personal" in The Plain Truth.

Once again, I hope all of you realize that the stoppage of transportation, slowing of the mails and serious economic strains placed upon a good section of the country have made their effects felt in God's Work, so we truly do appreciate the continued encouragement and support from all of you who can help take up the slack from those who have been hard hit!

Your brother in Christ,
Garner Ted Armstrong

It was too hard. They tried to bend back the door with a metal rod, but the door would not come free.

By this time the driver had lost feeling in his leg and was beginning to show signs of shock.

Finally one of them thought they might be able to lift the cab with a car jack. Bob ran back to the car and got the jack.

Through the Other Door

While the other three steadied the jack and raised the cab, Bob pulled the driver out from the top through the other door.

They took the injured driver back to their car while another trucker called the highway patrol on his Citizens Band radio. The injured trucker was taken to a hospital and at last report was in good condition.

According to Bob Crisp, the greatest danger might have been the cold weather.

"It's a good thing we were right behind him when it happened," he said. "Otherwise he might have frozen to death. If we hadn't seen it happen we probably would have passed it by like all the others, thinking that everything had been taken care of."

"I didn't notice the cold so much at first, until I put my hand in a puddle of water on the side of the hot cab. When I pulled my hand out of the puddle the water instantaneously froze on my hand."

Youths rescue injured driver

By Dave Molnar

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Alert thinking and quick action by two Ambassador College students and two Youth Opportunities United members were instrumental in saving the life of an injured truck driver in Tennessee Dec. 31.

The four — Bob Crisp, 17, delegate to the recent international YOU conference at Big Sandy from the Columbus (Ohio) P.M. church; George Fenton, 19, a YOU member here (the driver); Jim Todd, Ambassador, Big Sandy, senior; and Curt Lucka, Ambassador freshman — were driving home from the conference when they found themselves in the heart of the massive snowstorm that blanketed much of the nation Dec. 31.

A stretch of Interstate 40 between Memphis and Nashville "looked like a demolition derby," they said, with stranded cars and jackknifed trucks dotting the highway. It was on that stretch of road that the accident occurred.

"It had snowed all night the previous night," Bob Crisp said, "and the temperature had dropped well below zero [minus 18 degrees Celsius] the next day. The entire freeway was covered with a half inch of ice. We were lucky to do 10 miles per hour."

18-Wheeler on Ice

Suddenly an 18-wheel tractor-trailer rig botched past them at about 40 miles an hour on the glazed highway.

"We were surprised he was attempting to drive that speed," Bob said. "Just as he cleared us his trailer started to fishtail, and we knew he was in trouble."

The driver fought for control to no avail, and within seconds the rig toppled over directly in front of the Fenton car.

The four of them immediately jumped from their car and ran to help. They found the driver sitting inside the overturned cab with his leg outside the door and pinned beneath the cab.

"He evidently tried to jump out of the cab when he sensed that it was turning over," Bob said, "but he only got one leg out. We later found out he had a double compound fracture in the leg — broken from knee down."

The frigid temperatures combined with the stiff wind made for a chill factor that sent the temperature, in effect, to nearly 40 degrees below zero Fahrenheit (minus 40 degrees Celsius).

"We had to act fast," Bob said.

The four tried to pull the trucker's leg from beneath the cab, but it was wedged too tightly. They tried to dig the ground from beneath the leg, but

Mr. Barnett said he always sits in one of the cars that were crushed by the bridge because they are reserved for nonsmokers.

Newcastle member Wilf Matusch was attending a seminar in Sydney. He had planned to travel on the train but changed his mind the night before and went by car.

Rod Cooke's daughter usually catches the train, but that morning Mr. Cooke took her to the station earlier and she traveled on a different one. Deacon Alan Gubb's daughter Rhonda sometimes catches the train to work. On the morning of the crash she missed it.

Blackheath member Michael Djumovic had ridden the train to work for more than 10 years. In recent weeks he had given up the job and was at home when the crash occurred.

Crash misses members

By John A. Halford

BURLEIGH HEADS, Australia — More than 80 Australians were killed Jan. 18 and many more injured when a concrete road bridge collapsed on a derailed train in the Sydney suburb of Granville. No Church members were among the casualties, but there were some narrow escapes.

Deaconess Shirley Middlemiss was driving to work through Granville when the disaster occurred. Her vehicle was eight cars behind the cars crossing the bridge when it collapsed on the train.

Sydney member Bob Barnett had a late meeting with West Sydney minister Alan Dean the night before. Mr. Barnett slept in and caught a later train, though he usually travels to work on the train that was wrecked.

SOUND OF MUSIC — Teenage disc jockeys feature songs especially for the older set at a teen-sponsored social in Barrie, Ont. (See "Cross-Country Skiing," this page.)

Boy Scouts Sell Snacks

ANNISTON, Ala. — Brethren from the Anniston and Gadsden, Ala., churches gathered for a social Jan. 22. Activities began with a potluck supper, followed by a talent show. The boy scouts sold drinks and desserts.

Ginger Weaver and son David, who attend the Gadsden church, led the singing of "The Star-Spangled Banner." R.L. Pace, master of ceremonies, told jokes, and Ted Butler's gang and other groups performed songs. Charles Stennoe led the singing of "This Land Is Your Land." Mark Winner played a piano piece entitled "I Don't Know What the Name of It Is."

A square dance followed, with Bill Winner and the band providing the music. Verna Faye Johnson.

Cross-Country Skiing

BARRIE, Ont. — Members of all ages here participated in the fast-growing sport of cross-country skiing Jan. 16 at the Shanty Bay Country Club. Many of them had never attempted cross-country skiing before.

At noon the group gathered around a bonfire for hot chocolate.

Teens were sponsored at a church social Dec. 25. The young people under the direction of Glen Lucas and Debbie Hope handled all responsibilities. They provided baby-sitting and entertained the school-age youngsters with movies, while inside the main auditorium music was served up by a teen disc jockey who featured songs especially for the older set.

The entertainment featured a fashion show of literal and straightforward designs, such as a plunging neckline complete with a bathroom plunger. Other items included tennis-racket shoes, a 10-carrot necklace and a box skirt.

The teens auctioned off baked goods to raise money for the teen fund, netting almost $150. Lawrence W. Greider.

Revolutionary Artifacts

BINGHAMPTON, N.Y. — The Binghampton and Painted Post, N.Y., churches held a bicentennial semiformal dance in Ithaca, N.Y., at the Sheraton Inn Dec. 18. Several members came in Early American costumes to celebrate the event. Music for the dance was provided by Charlie Piscitello, member here, who was formerly a guitarist with Blood, Sweat and Tears and known as Charlie Starr.

Artifacts used during the Revolutionary War — flintlocks, powder horns, tomahawks, tin dinnerware, bullets and pouches — were displayed by a local collector, who also gave a lecture about clothing worn by the frontiersmen and life in those times.

Dick and Linda Furney emceed an entertainment program with a Parisian revue and modern dances. Frank and Francine Race were chosen winners in the costume parade and were awarded a punch-bowl set.

A sing-along came next, and dancing lasted until the wee hours. Proceeds of the dance were donated to YOU. Bob Forest.

Prime-Rib Dinner

BOISE, Idaho — Diane Sower, hostess for the evening, opened the Women's Club here Jan. 8 at the Rodeway Inn with 31 attending. The ladies invited their husbands, sons or friends to the prime-rib dinner meeting that concluded the first year of the club.

Speakers were Linda Crabtree and Lynn Bachr, who presented ideas on how families can enjoy winter activities. Judy McGowan led a discussion session, and Jeff McGowan, pastor here, concluded the meeting with a talk about the purpose and need for a women's club and what its goals should be. Aletia Paulson.

Thunder Egg Fossickers

BURLEIGH HEADS, Australia — Twenty-three people from the Gold Coast church searched for thunder eggs, eggs boiled hard as rocks and laid down by a volcano ages ago in what is now Thunderbird Park, about 30 miles from here.

The park has long been the hunting ground for thousands of fossickers searching for the remarkably patterned thunder eggs. For $1 each, members were allowed to search and dig all day. Several paid the 12-cents-per-square-inch fee to have their specimens cut to determine if they had found good eggs. Thunder eggs have to be sawn in two to reveal the agate or crystal formations inside, if any. No one found his fortune, but most went home with a supply of thunder eggs, hoping that after they are cut at least one will have made the outing worthwhile. David K. Noller.

Abraham's Arcade

CLEVELAND, Ohio — Fun for all ages was the purpose of Abraham's Arcade, a carnival sponsored by the East church here Jan. 2. Booths such as Boaz's Bingo Bonanza, Delilah's Duckies, Solomon's Treasure, Daniel's Darts and the Capernaum Cakewalk brought smiles and squeals of delight.

Tickets sold for 5 cents each, with admission to all games except the cakewalk for one ticket. Participants appeased their appetites with sloppy joes, hamburgers, cookies and popcorn at Sarah's Kosher Korner. Julia Palmer.

Shrewd Vermont Farmer

CLEVELAND, Ohio — If the Bicentennial Talent Show had been a contest, judges would have been hard pressed to choose a winner from the array of talent displayed by members of the West church here at Gargus Hall Dec. 26.

The diversity of acts included a demonstration by the basketball cheerleaders, a drum solo by Rich Taylor, selections by the children's choir, an accordion medley by Carol Dute and a hula dance by Ann Rolco, Paula Powell and Marge Watson. A vocal rendition of "Tender Appleblossoms" by Sam Jenkins was a big hit, as was a clown pantomime presented by 12-year-old Teresa High.

Gladys Mardis performed a clarinet solo and later teamed up for a vocal duet with Renee Williams. George High gave a medley of tunes, including yodeling, with his guitar, and a female quartet performed with five vocalists: Julie, Jackie and Janet Pachinger, Dana Schmoeck and Sharon Westfall. For the final act Wilma Davidson regaled the audience with a telephone monologue entitled "After the Ball."

Hilarious dialogue ensued when emcee Tex Henderson was interrupted from time to time by a shrewd Vermont farmer named Obadiah (Dan Abbott). Disc jockey Carl Craven closed by leading cast and audience in the singing of "God Bless America."

Light refreshments were served under the direction of Al and Audrey Savina. Ron and Gladys Mardis were show coordinators, Ray Williams was promotion man, Bill Gardner was audio director and Eileen Craven was piano accompanist.

The Cleveland West YOU chapter held a meeting and activity in Elyria, Ohio, Jan. 16 at the home of coordinators Ron and Brenda Gus. The day began with the meeting, with President Dale Smith and Vice President Ronda Dute presiding, assisted by secretary Nalene Honess and treasurer Robert Gus. A coming youth day and the YOU bylaws were discussed, as well as Nalene's trip to Big Sandy for the recent international youth conference.

Afterwards, even below-zero temperatures could not spoil the fun of sledding and tobogganing at Cascade Park on a quarter-mile stretch of a 200-foot-high hill. Then everyone rambled back to the Guses' home for hot dogs, cookies and hot chocolate. The outing was aptly described as "thrilling and chilling." Laverne J. Witting and Colleen Gus.

New Format

COLUMBIA, S.C. — The second monthly meeting of the Ladies' Club here was Jan. 12 at the Plumbers' Union Hall. John Ritenbaugh, pastor, spoke to the group about the community's Voluntary Action Service and announced the club's officers: Karen Martin, president; Charlene Wheatley, vice president; Betty Mize, secretary; and Betty Baity, treasurer.

Future meetings will have a new format. Each member will come prepared to tell briefly about something she has read, viewed or experienced in the last month. Others will then add their opinions and comments about each subject mentioned. The purpose of these discussions will be to share knowledge and to learn each other's interests and ideas. Karen Martin.

Cribbage and Canasta

CONCORD, N.H. — Members here met at the Knights' of Columbus hall for a game night Dec. 25. Chess, checkers, cribbage and canasta tournaments were held in addition to billiards, darts and other games. A door prize was given away. Snacks and drinks were provided. Bruce Elder.

Frosting on the Cake

DETROIT, Mich. — The East church here began Sabbath services Jan. 17 with the Toledo, Ohio, church choir performing special music.

After services the church here repaid the singers by inviting them to a dinner, social and talent show. The sit-down dinner of roast-beef sandwiches, coleslaw, potato chips and pie was served by the teenagers. The standing-in-line potluck dinner has given way here to this even more orderly and faster system.

The talent show put the frosting on the cake. The topper of the evening was the performance of pastor Reinhold "Shorty" Fuessel, who brought down the house with two popular trucking songs, "Phantom 103" and "Teddy Bear." Keith Hillman.

Wallabies and Wombats

DEVONPORT, Australia — Tasmanian teenagers squeezed the most activity they could from the last three days of 1976 with a hike and camp-out in the wild scrub Dec. 29 through 31. More than four hours of backpacking into the rugged Great Western Tiers and "Land of 3,000 Lakes" proved challenging, possibly more than anticipated, but all made it without dropping.

Kangaroos, wallabies, wombats, devils and tiger snakes were part and parcel of the trip, which ended with a camp-out on the shore of a quiet, never-visited trout lake. Hiking, shooting, fishing, dampers, a log fire and absolute solitude added up to a time of strenuous relaxation (if there is such a thing) and a welcome break from the mundane norm. Kerry Gubb.

Panel Discussion

EDMONTON, Alta. — The South church here was host for a panel discussion about juvenile crime Jan. 19.

The panelists were detective James Cummings, Youth Section, Edmonton City Police, who spoke about the type of crimes committed and apprehension; Henri Marsolais, community social worker here, who spoke on the function of the courts and the Family Social Service; and Robert Romito, a treatment supervisor, Youth Detention Center for Alberta, who discussed detention and rehabilitation.

January Inventory

GREENSBORO, N.C. — Sixteen people from the church here volunteered to do inventory for a Greensboro department store Jan. 3 to raise money for the Work. After the day's task was completed a check for $301.90 was issued to the Worldwide Church of God and forwarded to headquarters. The store's personnel manager was pleased with the performance of the members and asked them to return next year.

The first meeting of the Women's Club here was Jan. 9 at the home of pastor Bob League, with about 90 women attending.

Mr. League, club director, spoke about putting the club in its right perspective in relation to the Work and the Church. Faye League, club coordinator and adviser, then explained the purposes and format of the club. Its two main purposes are to be a service to the Work, the Church and the community and to improve the members so that they can help others more effectively.

The format of the club will be flexible, with several types of meetings. Guest speakers will give lectures or members will present talents or project demonstrations, working alone or in groups of two to four people. The club also plans to become involved in community projects. Paige Reid and Faye League.

Short Night's Sleep

HATTIESBURG, Miss. — The YWCA building here served a triple purpose for youth Jan. 8, beginning with the Sabbath services. Teens assisted during services with ushering, taking attendance, handing out hymnals, parking, coffee service, piano playing and cleanup. The YWCA representative who attended the recent international youth conference in Big Sandy spoke on what he learned there.

A formal dinner, with teen girls serving as waitresses and hostesses, was a fund-raising project for YWCA that evening.

Afterwards all enjoyed a rousing basketball game against the Meridian, Miss., team. Hattiesburg lost, but spirits picked up as 23 teens trooped to the YWCA coordinators' home for refreshments, a rap session about the youth conference and a short night's sleep.

The next day was filled with basketball, cheerleading and volleyball practice at the YWCA. Ann Odom.

Workingman's Social

HAYS, Kan. — Everyone wore

the clothes that he normally wore at his job for a church social here Jan. 2.

YOU members operated a concession stand selling cookies and cakes provided by the teens and pop purchased at discount prices by John Lueke. The brethren contributed items for a YOU white-elephant sale. The fund-raising projects brought in $257, of which $25 was sent to headquarters and $25 was given to the church fund, leaving $207 for YOU.

A rope-the-steer contest gave participants three tries for a quarter to rope a plastic steer head stuck on a hay bale. Anyone who roped the steer all three times received a free glass of pop.

At a box supper that evening, boys bought the girls' boxes and the adults bought each other's boxes. The Charlie Hensons paid $100 for the highest-selling box, made by Marvin Leiker.

Everyone brought his baby picture for a contest, with all trying to identify the pictures. Mrs. Gordon Wheatcroft was the winner, correctly naming 25 of the 46 pictures. Those attending also brought their craft and hobby projects for others to see.

The last event of the evening was a dance to the music of the Jolly Mixers.

Belated Celebration

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. — Some 260 members gathered at the Atkinson Hotel to celebrate the 14th anniversary of the church here with a semiformal dinner dance. The church was begun in September, 1962, but circumstances forced the delay of the celebration.

In attendance were Vernon Hargrove, pastor here; Burk McNair, Dennis Pyle and Don Lawson, all previously pastors here; Ed Smith, Cincinnati pastor; Garvin Greene, former ministerial trainee here and now pastor of the Anderson and Richmond, Ind., churches; and members of several nearby churches that previously attended here.

Door prizes were awarded during intermission, a skit was presented by several members and a history of the Indianapolis congregation was presented, with printed copies distributed to those attending. A band provided music for dancing. George Dellinger.

Basketball Bombers

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Another game, another win. That seems to be the name of the game for the Kansas City East Bombers basketball team. The Bombers' season record now stands at 6-0, after defeating Grand Island, Neb., 67-45 and 78-61 Dec. 26. With the addition of three new players and constant practice of the entire team, "the Bombers are the best they've ever been," says coach Richard DeBerry.

Contributing greatly in the team's victories are Dwayne Barnes' 28-point average and the 15-point averages of Mike Leipard, Bo Gregory and Lonnie Monneyham. In addition are the rebounding talents of Bruce Gregg, Bryon Kendricks and Gary Gregg and the defensive talents of Tris Anderson and Bill "Pistol" Kendricks.

The Bombers placed eighth in the national YOU competition last year. Linda DeBerry.

Family Movie Night

KENAI, Alaska — The Kenai church choir, a part of the Alaskan Festival choir, held a family movie night Dec. 18 to raise funds to buy equipment for a better speaker system to be used during the Feast seasons.

Refreshments were sold by choir members, with teens selling pop for the youth fund.

Don Webster, Alaskan choir director, said the movie night was successful. Joan Ellington.

Two-Horse Open Sleigh

KINGSTON, Ont. — Twenty Kingston and Smith's Falls, Ont., teenagers enjoyed Dec. 25 and 26 at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Storey, deacon and deaconess. Activities began with a turkey dinner with all the trimmings, followed by a chocolate fondue with fruit, marshmallows and cake to dip and games for everyone.

The next morning, after a breakfast of pancakes and sausages, all went ice skating.

That afternoon the Storeys' neighbor hitched his team of Percheron draft horses to an open sleigh and took the gang for a rollicking ride through woods and fields. Hot chocolate was served as everyone warmed up and dried off around the fireplace.

An early dinner of spaghetti and meatballs and pie completed the day, with parents picking the teens up at 4:30. Carolyn Gosse.

Cold Cash

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. — Seventy-three members of the congregation here braved near-zero weather Jan. 16 to participate in a department store's semiannual inventory. The members put in 426 man-hours of work, earning nearly $1,000 in the fund-raising effort, part of which will be donated to the Work.

This was the third time that a group here has been involved in the inventory, and, based on a job well done last year, the group was assigned to sections of the store that needed to be done quickly and accurately.

The next inventory will be in July. John Bass.

Men's Cake Competition

MIDLAND, Mich. — The brethren from the Midland and Gaylord, Mich., churches met Jan. 15 for a spaghetti dinner sponsored by the graduates' Spokesman Club. The ladies had the day off while the men did all the cooking.

Each man also brought an item he had baked for a bake sale. After the judges had tasted all the entries and reached a decision, an auction took place with pastor Gerald Weston as auctioneer. First prize, a chef's cap, was won by Dick Johnson, who had made a three-layer cake with black, sweet cherries and whipped cream, decorated with a smiling face. Wilbert McGeorge won second with his popcorn cake full of gumdrops and nuts. Duane Ledy took third with his raw-apple cake. Ray Griffie received honorable mention for his cake, which was shaped like a large golf ball on a tee on the 19th hole. The auction brought in over $100, with the winning cake selling for $13.

The cakes were eaten for dessert after everyone had filled up on spaghetti, garlic bread, tossed salad and beverages. Some of the men braved the freezing cold for an hour of playing football, while the women and children ice skated or played table games. Betty Tomich.

Plant Lovers Brave Cold

MILWAUKEE, Wis. — A cold and snowy evening did not stop the flower and plant lovers of the Women's Club here from attending their meeting Dec. 29. The topic of interest was flower gardening and indoor houseplants. Speaker for the evening was Amy O'Herrin, a club member, manager of Williamsburg Flower Shop in Brookfield, Wis., and a graduate of Gateway Technical Institute with a degree in horticultural marketing.

Her talk emphasized organization of a flower garden with varieties, colors and requirements in mind and the needs and care of houseplants. She also brought examples of houseplants and sold them to eager customers after the meeting.

Mrs. O'Herrin's popular subject opened the meeting to many helpful comments and questions from the women. Pat Kuczyński.

What do a chicken, a gypsy, Steve Austin, a mummy, a robot, a cowboy, a clown, a pig, an Indian princess, a tiger and a fairy have in common? They all attended a costume party for the Minneapolis North church's children's choir Dec. 27 at the home of director Jean Cline.

First place for the most original costume went to Tommy Smiley, 5, the choir's youngest member. Games were played, including a race by two teams to stuff balloons into long Johns worn by two of the mothers. After a potluck supper children decorated their cupcakes with candy faces.

The choir sang "Sabbath Prayer" and "Somebody Bigger Than You and I" at services Jan. 8. Dick Ziminski and Jean Cline.

Wild Duckeroo

MISSOULA, Mont. — Western hospitality was at its best Dec. 26, when the Missoula and Kalispell, Mont., churches met at Charlo, Mont., near Flathead Lake, for the annual Wild Duckeroo. About 110 people attended the event, including visiting ministerial trainee Randall Stiver and his wife Linda, who traveled from Great Falls, Mont.

The western meal featured wild duck as the main dish.

Following the meal, a cakewalk raised money for the YOU chapter here and helped settle the food. Then came volleyball, after which members took time out for an hour of square dancing.

Concluding the day's events was the annual Missoula and Kalispell basketball game, with Missoula coming out on top, 31-30.

Mr. and Mrs. David Steindorf were instrumental in planning and organizing the event and also provided the majority of the wild ducks. Rick Baumgartner.

Wagon-Wheel Chandelier

MONROE, La. — Calls of "Swing your partner and promenade" filled the air here Jan. 8 as the church held its annual square dance. Bales of hay, plow tools and other country relics were brought in to set the scene. Decorations were topped off with a big wagon wheel and kerosene lanterns made into a chandelier.

A variety show kicked off the action, with a band and singers. Then the dancing began, presided over by a professional square-dance caller imported from Arkansas.

As a drawing card and attendance booster, there was a door-prize drawing and cash prizes for best country-and-western wear in adult and youth age groups. Nick Rogers.

European and Israeli folk dances were performed by the Veselo Kolo Dancers, a group of Ambassador College students and Pasadena-area members. The group, whose name means happy-circle dancers, was formed about three years ago to promote international dancing and cultural exchange. Its membership consists of young men and women from Greece, Germany, Malaysia, Canada and the United States. They have performed for many groups including shut-ins at convalescent hospitals. NASHVILLE, Tenn. — "Do you know a drug abuser?" This question was asked by Lieutenant Charles Stoner, former member of the Nashville Metro Vice Squad, as he spoke before a breakfast meeting of the Ladies' Club here Jan. 16, with about 60 members attending. Lieutenant Stoner has been in police work for 23 years, but now only lectures.

At the beginning of the program, Lieutenant Stoner lighted something in a tray, let it smoke for a while, then asked, "Has anyone experienced the odor of marijuana?" Several raised their hands. However, near the end of the program he repeated the question, stating: "We've had breakfast, but we might not have dinner after I tell you what was burning. It was horse manure and alfalfa." He explained that the mixture smells similar to marijuana.

He discussed how parents could determine if their children were on drugs, but said he had never had to deal with drug abuse in homes where the children had a "strong religious background."

The Nashville church's Mixed League concluded play at Hendersonville Bowl Jan. 16 after 14 weeks and 43 games.

Trophies were presented during the annual winter social Jan. 22. League champions were the Lucky Strikes: Larry Hunt, Sue Rutledge and David and Sandra Duncan. The Lucky Strikes and the Three-Legged Chickens were tied for first place and bowled each other on the final night, with the Strikes winning four for first place.

Individual honors went to Larry Hunt for his 165 average and Annie Way with the women's high average of 140.

A mock fashion show had everyone in stitches, with Sue Grace as master of ceremonies. Mrs. Rynekey modeled bell-bottoms with bells. Beth Estes modeled a grass skirt. Pat Grace displayed the conventional office shirt, and Devona Kinder braved the crowd to model hot pants. Mae Estes concluded the showing with an inexpensive sack dress made from a sack.

After everyone composed himself, Margaret Franz presented a dramatic reading, Esther Brooks recited a sketch, and Jerry Potillo did a humorous rendition of "Little Bo Peep" as viewed from the pulpit, with Ed Kinder, James Barker and Roger Franz supplying solemn ams.

Jupiter's Moons

SONOMA, Calif. — The Santa Rosa and Fairfield, Calif., churches held their first session of Sabbath school during combined services at the Veterans' Memorial Auditorium here Jan. 8. Sabbath school will be the second Sabbath of the month, when the churches meet for combined services at this location.

Coordinator Ron Wheeler is assisted by many people, including two professional teachers, Ann Henneman and Darrell Watkins.

The school is divided into three groups: preschool, ages 3 to 5, coordinated by Geraldine Nielsen; first through third grades, coordinated by Barbara Wheeler; and fourth through sixth grades, coordinated by Bob Sturm.

All classes covered the first and second days of creation. The sessions are 30 minutes long, with a break for refreshments. A special attraction for the youngsters was peering through a powerful telescope brought by Stephen Gregg, through which the moons of Jupiter were observed.

Ed Mauzey, pastor of the two churches, was pleased with the first session and is hoping the school can be expanded to include the older children.

Hal Baird, pastor of the Palo Alto, Calif., church, delivered the sermon. Brethren met and welcomed Mrs. Baird, the former Louise Morgan.

first meeting of the newly formed Men's and Ladies' Breakfast Club was at Bonanza Steak House in West Springfield Jan. 16, with about 30 people attending. After breakfast was served, a detailed discussion about the new club was led by Harry Schaefer, associate pastor here.

The idea for the club was received from Robert Bragg, pastor of the Al-lentown, Pa., church. A consideration of the equal talents and abilities of both men and women was used as a basis in forming the new organization. It will replace the previously separate Spokesman and Ladies' clubs.

The monthly meetings will include breakfast, a presentation of two or three speeches and an open forum about the topics discussed. Richard D. Beltz.

'50s Revisited

SUDBURY, Ont. — It was reminiscing time here Jan. 15 as the church turned back the clock to the decade of the 1950s. With eye-appealing baked goods on display for sale, the mood of the social was set. The sale netted a record $303.35.

Dressed in leather jacket, dark glasses, Levis and captain's cap, emcee Dennis Schmucker introduced a cool-looking Sudbury band, who delighted the brethren with musical memories of the '50s.

A dance marathon to taped music of that era was competed in by no less than 23 couples. It lasted one hour, with few dropping out. Eventually Jim Stubbs and his partner, Chris Uhlig, were declared the winners. Carl Lync...

Baby-Bottle Mugs

TULSA, Okla. — A deacons' beer-drinking race was a high point of a square dance and family get-together Jan. 16, with the Women's Club here sponsoring the event.

Six deacons and elders were enlisted and slightly coerced to participate in a beer-drinking race. Facing the audience, the contestants were told to turn and grab their mugs. They turned and found the mugs were baby bottles equipped with new nipples. The goal was in sight and the method was obvious, but it was harder than it looked. Jax Britton drained his bottle first and won the prize, his choice at the bar, where the ladies were selling soft drinks, cookies and sandwiches.

A balloon stomp for those 12 and under had youngsters trying to step on and break others' balloons while keeping their own intact. Shelly Britton was declared champion balloon stomper.

Cakewalks, door prizes and pass-the-lifesaver-with-a-toothpick were other events enjoyed, as well as the square dancing and fellowship. Sandra Hinman.

Aquatic Program

WASHINGTON — The Itchtuk-nee River of northern Florida flows into a jug-shaped natural faucet and forces 600 million gallons of 70-degree spring water up the neck and out of the 10-foot diameter mouth every day. YOU divers here explored the spring, called Jug Spring, on a diving and canoeing trip to northern Florida Dec. 23 to 31.

The trip was conceived last summer when Randy Dick, then associate pastor here and YOU regional director, set up an aquatics program, a mini-SEP, for all interested youth. C.C. Williams, coordinator and instructor for the trip and certified by the National Association of Underwater Instructors, taught the teens scuba and skin diving.

Nineteen adventurers made the trip: Mr. and Mrs. Williams, Dee, Matt, Sunnie and Kelly; Mr. and Mrs. Herman Kessner, Jeff and Karen; Mr. and Mrs. Larry Salyer, Lisa, Jeff and Julie, Sherry and Monty Williams; Lisa Coleman; and Marietta Duray. Four other YOU members qualified but were unable to make the trip: John and Stephanie Finlay, Mark Williams and Steve Kessner.

Each of the eight YOU members paid only $30 for the trip, because of a Spokesman Club donation of $200. The cost was "considerably more for the families," commented Mr. Williams.

Part of the crew drove two vans and a pickup truck to Florida. Once in Florida they stayed overnight with the Dicks, who had recently been transferred to pastor the Jacksonville church. The next day they camped at O'Leno State Park, on the Santa Fe River. The Sabbath was Dec. 25, so Mr. Salyer, pastor here, fielded questions from the youths about Christmas.

Sunday featured a 12-mile canoe (See WRAP-UP, page 15) trip down the Santa Fe to a waiting pickup truck. Next day the group returned to Ginny Spring for the 150-foot cave dive. Mr. Salyer, after a brief instruction period, made his first scuba dive there.

Besides diving Jug Spring on Tuesday, the group stopped at Ichituckee Spring, where the river bubbles 20 million gallons a day out of the ground.

Wednesday, the adventurers canoe and snorkled 3 1/2 miles of the Ichituckee River. While snorkeling a game of follow-the-leader, Marietta confronted a three-foot catfish, but Monty rescued her by swimming after it with a knife.

The adventurers reluctantly broke camp Thursday. Mrs. Kessner guessed that she cooked 1,000 pancakes during the trip for the hungry campers.

A long-running Monopoly game ended in a tie, according to one grinning and biased source. Robert Curry.

Public Drawing

WATERTOWN, S.D. — The public drawing for the quilt made by the Worldwide Church of God Women (WWW) was Dec. 31 at the House of Fabrics, where Margaret Bailey, manager of the shop, did the drawing. JoAnn Braun of Webster, S.D., was the winner.

The $500 goal set by the women was exceeded by 50 cents, bringing the total gained to $500.50. After sending a tithe and tithing an offering to headquarters, pastor Art Dyer said the remainder of the money will be used for activities here.

Prizes were awarded for top sales to LaVonne Schaefer, Frieda Tupper, Viola Bitz, Janice Spieker, Marie Beebe, Peggy Wangness, Elaine Nelson, Marie Skorseth, Linda Dyer, Laura Thompson, Julie Hoffman and Margie Cook.

The church here participated in its first Action Day Jan. 15, organized by Tom Hoffman, chairman of social events. After Sabbath services, in minus-20-degree temperatures, members divided into three groups and visited Jenkins Nursing Home, Methodist Nursing Home (where the people expected Mr. Dyer to conduct church services), and the Kampeska Home for the Retarded.

After returning to the meeting hall, a covered-dish meal was served. The evening was spent playing bingo, while the youngsters went roller skating. Frieda B. Tupper.

Boogie Fever

WHEELING, W. Va. — Teens here boogied to the sounds of the latest hits Dec. 26, with the help of a disc jockey.

The theme was black and white, which meant that all the decorations were black and white. But to make it unusual, Sandy Lazear, head of the decorations committee, made black everything that is usually white, and vice versa. This created an odd, but interesting, atmosphere. Melody Gable.

Little Big Horn

WINDSOR, Ont. — About 60 residents of the University Rest Home here were treated to a variety show by members of the Windsor congregation Jan. 8. The audience was treated to vocal and instrumental music by Mike and Carol Greaves, Jim and John Paterson, Len Brown, and a children's trio called The Bondy Bunch. Other performances included a magic act by Jim Paterson, an original poetic recitation by Darlene Parks, and a skit entitled "If I Were Not a Teenager" by four of the teens.

An impromptu sing-along was accompanied by guest performers Frank and Rock Ciccone on guitar and accordion. Following the program, refreshments were served by the young people. The evening concluded with a pizza party for the cast and their families at the home of pastor Tom Ecker.

The Holiday Inn ballroom was the scene of the church's formal dinner and dance Jan. 15. The Little Big Horn contributed to the mood of the evening with its smooth dancing music. The windows of the Fore 'n' Aft Lounge overlooked the icebound Detroit River for those wishing a cool view. Leslie A. Turvey and Rita Jar-dim.

Bowling Leagues

WICHITA, Kan. — Every Wednesday morning church women here gather at a bowling center for a game of bowling. Sometimes they have an early-morning coffee hour, with everyone bringing cakes, cookies or rolls. The women started the league in the fall of 1975 with 18 members, but now the number has increased to 30. Most of the women had never bowled before and took advantage of the free lessons offered through the bowling center.

Three elderly members have joined the league: Agnes Anderson, 69; Ellen Hatten, 81; and Indes Gordon, 66. Even though they had never bowled before, they are making up for lost time with excellent bowling averages.

Officers are elected each season. Current officers are Vera Murphy, president; Judy Allen, vice president; Faith Stuber, secretary; and Roma Tension, sergeant at arms.

In addition to the women's league are two Monday-night mixed leagues. During the summer, children 5 years and older learn to bowl and have their own league.

At a banquet at the end of the season, patches and trophies are awarded for high series, high games, most-improved, and first-, second- and last-place teams.

The Woman's Club here met at the Ramada Inn Jan. 14 with Mrs. Jerold Aust presiding.

The women discussed Deborah, this month's "woman of the Bible." Next month's featured woman will be Mary, mother of Jesus.

With a display of plants before her, Sarah Albertson, owner of Daisy Power, a Wichita plant store, gave a lecture about soil, food, lighting, humidity and water for plants.

The February meeting will feature a spring fashion show. Roma Tension and Gail Hubbell.

Balloons at the Ball

WIMBLEDON, England — Members came from several nearby churches to dance to the music of the Bernard Dessey Trio at the church ball here Jan. 8. Dances included the cha-cha, the quickstep, the twist, the conga and gay Gordons.

Food and drinks were available at a buffet. Entertainment was composed by Geoffrey Stilwell, who was joined by Brian Fields in a comedy skit and sang "Cabaret."

Kenneth Whitten conducted the Orpington singers, who sang "Spanish Eyes" and "More," accompanied on the guitar by David Jardine. This was preceded by a vocal solo, "Summertime," by Julie Irwin. As a contrast, Alan Pleasance gave a trumpet rendition of "The Shadow of Your Smile," followed by Eileen Clayton playing "I'm Getting Sentimental Over You" on the electric organ.

The church's chorale presented several numbers, and Sue Fenchel sang "Wouldn't It Be Lovely?" accompanied by Julian Martin on the piano.

Prizes were awarded to winners of an elimination dance, and at one point during the evening, balloons floated down over the dancers. David Gomm.

Cold Costumes

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio — With the chill factor outside at minus-60 degrees, brethren here gathered at the Pointview Ballroom for a winter dance Jan. 21.

Members came in costumes. Steve Roberts came dressed as the Pillsbury doughboy and captured two prizes, one for the best costume for children under 12, and the other for the best likeness. Theresa Henry, who came as a midget in a box, was judged as having the most original idea. The geisha girl, Mary Jorja, was awarded a prize for the best adult costume while the prize for the most humorous costumes went to pastor Eugene Noel and his wife Jan, as the overstuffed Mr. and Mrs. Frosty the Snowman.

Other awards were won by Ian and Kelly Lamon, who came as a bicentennial family, and Amy Norris, who won the best-group prize. Linda Morris and Leslie Fiebigler came as Big Bird and a friend and won the teenager prize.

Entertainment was provided by a professional band, The Gentlemen's Court. Children were amused by carnival games constructed by some of the members.

The decorations followed a circus motif, with clown posters, a caged animal and a circus-tent bar.

Travis Hoskinson guessed within 20 the number of corn kernels in a jar and received a prize. Katy Hoskinson and Ralph Orr.

He immediately returned to Washington after the last lecture, where the Hill family is awaiting the birth of Mr. Hill's first grandchild.

PASADENA — Mike Carter, a forward on the Royals basketball squad here, was named Miller

MIKE CARTER

California College Player of the Week Feb. 1 by the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics (NAIA). Carter, an 18-year-old freshman from Sunnyvale, Calif., was chosen from 30 candidates from California colleges and universities.

The recognition is the second of its kind for the Royal starter this season. He is currently the only player in California who ranks among the top 20 small-college scorers in the nation, standing at 15th.

Carter is the leading scorer in District 111 of the NAIA, with a 26.1-point-per-game average, hitting 51.8 percent of his shots. He also holds second place in rebounding in District 111.

"I wish there was some way the team could get it [the honor]," Carter said. "It wasn't individual effort.

Manila conferees plan new program

By Pete Melendez

MANILA, Philippines — "This was by far the best conference yet," said Colin Adair, director of God's Work in the Philippines and Northeast Asia, in summing up the 1977 ministerial conference held in the Ambassador College Agency's office here Jan. 17 to 20. The fifth annual conference since 1973, it was attended by the six ministers and four assistants in this country.

As in previous conferences, this year's updated the ministers and other key personnel on how 1976 went for the Work here, plans for 1977, organizational changes and doctrinal statements and policies from Pasadena.

"I'm glad there were not really any differences of opinion as regards doctrine, maybe just a few misunderstandings of administration, but not major differences," Mr. Adair said.

"I believe if we all just stick to the trunk of the tree and look to the one God has placed as head of the Work on earth and believe what he has been inspired of God to see as regards doctrine, then we can't go wrong."

An important subject taken up at the conference was church development, not in the sense of an inwardly directed growth, but growth to help the Church of God here do its part in fulfilling the commission to preach the Gospel to the world.

Nationwide Program

A nationwide program of development had been worked out and was discussed by Mr. Adair at the conference. He was assisted by the Manila office's Coordinating Center, headed by Pike Mirto, a preaching elder, with Rey Taniajura and Pete Melendez as assistants.

The program's purpose is to move members toward greater Christian maturity and develop leadership in administrative work in the Church.

The member-development program includes activities in addition to regular Sabbath services and Bible studies. An essential aspect is special classes called Principles of Christian Living to be conducted by a minister for small groups of interested members.

As the curriculum literature for the course puts it: "Because the Church itself is composed of varied interest groups, the sermons (at Sabbath services) must be by necessity broad and comprehensive."

These special classes, therefore, allow the minister to zero in on specific subjects on the individual and his relationship with God, his family, the Church and the world. The format gives the minister the chance to address specific groups (such as young people, married couples, senior members) on their problems and interests, which may not be of general enough interest to bring up at Sabbath services or Bible studies. At the same time it gives the people a chance to air questions they may not otherwise ask at studies.

A week after the conference, already Principles of Christian Living classes have been opened in three churches: Metro-Manila, Camarines Sur and Iloilo.

Leadership Development

With only six ministers pastoring some 1,750 members dispersed in this archipelago of more than 7,000 islands, the need for competent leaders to assist the ministry in administering church activities was underscored at the conference.

A nationwide program of leadership development has therefore been designed to give members with leadership potential training to equip them in assisting the ministry in church administration. This way, Mr. Adair says, it is hoped the ministers can have more time for the spiritual work of the Church.

Basic and advanced leadership-training courses have been designed for those two levels of leadership aptitude. Each course has a curriculum containing lectures on basic or advanced management and supervision, as well as basic or advanced biblical principles with emphasis on leadership, church government and the Kingdom of God.

Besides classroom training, leadership trainees will also apply what they learn to actual activities in the churches. Among these are physical arrangements for Sabbath services, Bible studies, church socials and annual festivals.

Two basic leadership courses were recently completed here, and an advanced course is now going on. Two new basic courses have been opened in Camarines Sur and Iloilo, and another will soon be in Pangasinan.

Without the team I couldn't have done it."

PASADENA — Robert Ashland, director of physical-plant operations for Ambassador College here, is analyzing energy needs of the campus to see what can be done to save fuel in light of national shortages and cutbacks.

"We are investigating practical approaches to maximize energy saving," Mr. Ashland said.

The move comes after President Jimmy Carter's request that Americans sacrifice to ease fuel shortages.

Mr. Ashland said complying with the President's request isn't as easy as it may seem. Dropping thermostats to 65 degrees (18 degrees Celsius) as per Mr. Carter's request, for example, causes Ambassador's air conditioners to come on, resulting in the use of more energy, not less, Mr. Ashland said.

BURLEIGH HEADS, Australia — Regional director Dean Wilson met with area coordinators Bob Mitchell, Graeme Marshall and Mark Cardona and administrative personnel in a series of meetings here the first week of February.

Mr. Wilson outlined objectives of the Work in this country for the remainder of the year. Major plans, he said, include the expansion of the Garner Ted Armstrong telecast to reach all Australian homes, the addition of new radio stations and campaigns in major cities in June, July and August.

Business manager John Crabtree and Plain Truth circulation manager Roy Hickford presented reports on their departments' activities.

KUMASI, Ghana — Harold Jackson, director of the Black African Work, and Abner Washington, pastor of the Accra, Ghana, church, conducted the first services of the new Kumasi church Jan. 8. Mr. Jackson had traveled to this country from his office in Bricklet Wood, England, for the inaugural services of two congregations in Ghana. The first was Dec. 25 in Accra (The Worldwide News, Jan. 31).

Mr. Washington, who lives with his wife in Accra, announced his speaking schedule as he travels among the two Ghanaian congregations and two in Nigeria. He plans to speak in Lagos, Nigeria, the first Sabbath of each month; Kumasi the second; Enugu, Nigeria, the third; and Accra the fourth. Thirty-one adults and nine children attended the first services here, according to Church member Stephen Ageymang-Duah.

BUFFALO BLUES — Two residents of Summer Street in Buffalo, N.Y., brave the elements in the aftermath of record-making snowstorms that forced cancellation of church services for two consecutive Sabbaths, Jan. 29 and Feb. 5. Buffalo member Rolin Perryman, left, clears a path, while a neighbor uses skis to get around clogged but traffic-free streets, right. The large accumulation of snow has now been mostly removed and temperatures have soared to around 40 degrees (4 degrees Celsius). Stricken Buffalo may still be in deep water, though, as swollen waterways threaten to flood the area if things get too warm too quick. [Photos by Robert R. Rodkey]
