

FEAST SITES AGAIN AT SQUAW VALLEY AND JEKYLL ISLAND

By Herbert W. Armstrong
Some thousands of our people will be joyously elated to know that this fall we shall be using again, in all probability, both Squaw Valley [Calif.] and Jekyll Island [Ga.] Feast sites.

Already I had announced that we are repairing the big tabernacle at Mount Pocono [Pa.] and will be using it again. About a third of the Mount Pocono tabernacle was ruined by the heavy snow cave-in three years ago. As repaired it will only seat some 8,000, but the registration building is still intact, and we can again accept two thirds or more of the number who formerly attended there.

Squaw Valley is not 100 percent sure yet, but the management does want us back, and will make certain necessary repairs. I have OK'd it, and I'm sure we will be able to use it, though perhaps not quite as large a number of members can be accepted there as formerly. It will replace Fresno, Calif., this year.

In a sense we still have Niagara Falls [N.Y.]. It will be used primarily by the Canadian churches, but United States members who especially want to attend at Niagara Falls may be able to transfer there, upon request.

Because of new construction in the area in St. Petersburg [Fla.], there will be parking space for only about 8,500 there, whereas we have formerly accommodated there up to 12,000. So, this year we are again going back to Jekyll Island where 3,500 can be accommodated. A new auditorium facility has been added there that will accommodate up to 3,500. Thus Jekyll and St. Petersburg will together accommodate the same 12,000 combined that formerly went to St. Petersburg alone.

We shall expect a larger attendance of 8,500 at Tucson, whereas we had about 5,000 last fall.

I have asked the Festival Office to reduce the number of Feast sites this year, with larger attendance at several. I felt we were going too far on the number of sites, reducing the number of brethren at each site. I could see it leading to a situation where either each local church would almost stay home and have its own Feast — or, two or three churches in a close area would combine and virtually stay home for the Feast.

God revealed to me, even before or at the time of conversion, that the seven annual Holy Days, or annual Sabbaths, were observed by the New Testament Church and by Christ, and ordained FOREVER! For seven years my wife and I kept them alone, by ourselves. When I explained them and their continuous binding by God to the brethren of the Sardis era in the Willamette Valley of Oregon, they "laughed me to scorn" — (read II Chronicles 30:5-10).

But when the fledgling parent of the present era, Worldwide Church of God, was first raised up, after seven years in 1933, they, mostly converted through my preaching, all began keeping the annual Sabbaths with us.

It was 12 years later, 1945, when God showed me the PURPOSE of the Feast of Tabernacles, and that we should leave our homes in this world for eight days and enjoy a foretaste of the thousand-year reign with Christ in WORLD PEACE, with Satan gone, as well as the Great White Throne Judgment for perhaps the next hundred years following.

We went that year to the very beautiful little site of Belknap Springs [Ore.] — but 100 attendance overcrowded it. We held the Feast there for seven years. Then, 1952, the one and only site was Siegler Springs, northeast of San Francisco, Calif. Beginning 1953 it was held at Big Sandy, Tex. In the early '60s, we added Squaw Valley, then Jekyll Island, then Mount Pocono — and the number of sites has been growing ever since.

But just to remain home at our own local church does not seem to fulfill God's PURPOSE for the Festival. In old times the people left home and traveled to Jerusalem for the Feast:

Following is a list of revised sites and projected attendance being prepared for the 1981 Feast of Tabernacles:

Worldwide News blankets world

PASADENA — Ever wonder how copies of The Worldwide News reach brethren around the world? Ten-year-old Jennifer Adams of the Alexandria, La., church wrote WN Managing Editor Dexter Faulkner to find out. Rather than simply write Jennifer a reply, Mr. Faulkner directed that the answer be put in the pages of The Worldwide News for all of our readers' benefit.

Let's begin at the beginning. After two weeks of writing, editing, proofreading, laying out and typesetting, paste-ups of the WN are hand-carried to a printer near Pasadena. After the paper is printed, the printing firm delivers bound stacks of the WN to the Work's Shipping Department.

Now to answer Jennifer's question about distribution.

From the Shipping Department the paper is divided up and sent to different departments on campus, with additional copies shipped to the Work's overseas offices. Of the 57,500 printed copies, 38,000 are sent to the Work's Postal Center [WN, Aug. 25, 1980], where, according to director Eric Shaw, The Worldwide News is mailed by second class postage to members in the United States.

U.S. Church pastors receive their copies by first-class mail, according to Church policy. Two hundred copies are carried to the Ambassador College student center, where students pick up their issues.

A Worldwide link

From the Shipping Department, several thousand copies are sent overseas. Since postage rates are more expensive outside the United States, The Worldwide News is distributed a little differently, according to Rod Matthews, manager of the International Office of Ministerial Services.

In Australia and New Zealand, for example, the copies are bulk-shipped to the Work's offices there, where they are later distributed to local pastors. They, in turn, hand out copies to members after Sabbath services.

The offices in Australia and New Zealand also distribute copies to brethren on the Pacific Islands and in Southeast Asia, Mr. Matthews said.

The British connection

Three thousand copies of the WN are sent to the Work's offices in Britain, where they are mailed and distributed to English-speaking brethren in Europe, the Middle East and parts of Africa. Copies are also shipped from Pasadena to the Work's South African and Canadian offices, where individual distribution is made.

Going into every inhabited continent, 2,000 copies of The Worldwide News are also sent to the Phil-

Pastor general exhorts nearly 3,000 in Seattle

SEATTLE, Wash. — A "human Mt. St. Helens" hit the people of Washington and Oregon in the person of Pastor General Herbert W. Armstrong Feb. 14, said evangelist Dean Blackwell, who accompanied Mr. Armstrong from Tucson.

Speaking to an overflow crowd of 2,700 in the Seattle Convention Center, Mr. Armstrong "vigorously exhorted" the people for more than two hours, Mr. Blackwell reported.

"The air was really charged with excitement. Mr. Armstrong was excited; the brethren were excited — when he drove up to the stage the people rose in a tumultuous standing ovation. It was very evident the people of this Church love and support their apostle."

Powerful message

"He's physically in great shape," Mr. Blackwell added. "He was articulate and powerful in his sermon — he really belted it out and the brethren responded."

The pastor general will travel to major cities every two weeks as circumstances permit, according to evangelist Joseph Tkach, director of Ministerial Services. He said that Mr. Armstrong "feels the responsibility of staying in touch with God's people. He's intent on helping brethren prepare themselves to become the Bride of Christ. And he wants the personal contact."

Mr. Tkach said that Mr. Armstrong is "committed to strengthening God's Church and Work. He's set himself to making new radio and television programs and now is adding these personal appearances in his busy schedule. He's literally a human dynamo." Mr. Blackwell added, "He's one of a kind — no one can keep up with his pace."

Speaking schedule

Other cities being considered for trips include New York; Detroit, Mich.; Dallas, Tex.; Chicago, Ill.; and other major metropolitan centers in the United States and Canada, Mr. Tkach said.

"He's preaching powerful meat," Mr. Blackwell said. "He's saying some new things, setting strong new courses and directing the people toward God and Christ."

Mr. Blackwell added: "He once remarked privately that God really had His work cut out for Him when He decided to change humans to bring them into His family. Mr. Armstrong is determined to do whatever he can to fulfill his role in this."

Mr. Armstrong was accompanied by his wife Ramona, Leroy and Avon Neff and Mr. Blackwell and his wife Maxine on the flight from Tucson.

Latin American turmoil: trouble for U.S.?

PASADENA — The world is waiting apprehensively to see whether the Soviet Union will intervene in Poland to preserve its foothold in Eastern Europe — Moscow's most critical sphere of interest.

At the same time, the United States is slowly losing ground to Moscow-trained agents within its sphere of strategic interest, the Western Hemisphere.

Washington, under the new Reagan administration, shows signs of coming to life after years of excusing the tactics of Cuba, Nicaragua's Sandinistas and other leftist insurgents. Feb. 12, the United States displayed documents proving that the tons of weapons flowing to the leftist guerrillas in El Salvador are supplied by a worldwide network extending from Moscow variously through Cuba, Nicaragua, North Korea, Vietnam, Ethiopia and the Palestine Liberation Organization.

Washington to blame

Tragically, Washington itself is largely responsible for the political deterioration throughout Central America and parts of the Caribbean.

Recent U.S. foreign policy contributed to the destabilization of governments, in the name of promoting "change." This unwittingly gave the green light to Moscow and Havana to act as the prime agents of "change."

In an article in the January, 1981, issue of Commentary, America's new ambassador to the United Nations, Jeanne Kirkpatrick, reveals how officials in the previous administration learned the wrong "lessons" from Vietnam and decided that Washington must never again be on the "wrong side of history." They felt that America must henceforth act with "modesty and restraint" in world affairs.

In other words, Vietnam had shattered the pride in America's power!

Regarding Latin America, Washington no longer wished to view trends there in terms of hemispheric security or traditional U.S. interests. America had shed, said President Carter, its "inordinate fear" of communism; there no longer was an East-West struggle in the Americas, regardless of Cuba's support of the revolutionary left.

Latin America was henceforth treated as part and parcel of the mythical "North-South dialogue."

Abstract, lofty goals such as "fairness," and "human rights" — unattainable in this world — assumed preeminence. Tragically, this policy was tailor-made for Communist insurgents, who found it easier than ever to preempt any movement considered by Washington to be a "popular force."

Thanks to this new outlook, the United States insured the Sandinista victory in Nicaragua. While Fidel Castro was airlifting plane loads of arms to the rebel forces, the U.S. government shut off military assistance to the beleaguered government of Anastasio Somoza.

The rest is history. The new Nicaraguan government has slipped almost totally into the Marxist orbit. National elections won't be held until at least 1985; the public must first be "reeducated" in the meantime to know how to vote.

The Nicaraguan public now realizes this was not what they bargained for when they rose up en masse against the Somoza dictatorship. The Communists cleverly preempted the revolution. As one lady in Nicaragua said: "We haven't fought for this. We were fighting to get Somoza off our backs. That's why we supported them [the Sandinistas] — not to fall into a nearly 100 percent Communist direction."

El Salvador quagmire

The results in Nicaragua did not dampen the Carter administration's support of "forces of change" elsewhere in Central America, notably El Salvador and Guatemala.

What is happening in El Salvador is no civil war, as the press carelessly presents it. The public at large is sick and tired of the violence, which claimed 9,000 lives last year.

There are differences between Nicaragua and El Salvador. In El Salvador, rulership did not take the Personalismo form as in the case of Mr. Somoza's government. Neither was there a groundswell of public support to remove the old regime despite inequities within the country.

The issue was rather the attempt on the part of the radical left to ride the tide of Sandinismo into power.

What El Salvador is experiencing, one source close to the scene told me, "is not civil war; it is terrorism and vandalism." Crops are torched in the field; terrorists conduct daylight robberies in the cities; buses are stopped, passengers told to leave, the vehicles set to flame.

Young people are kidnapped and forced to join the terrorist brigades. Hideous atrocities — dismembered bodies — are commonplace.

The popular press has spectacularized the incidents of right-wing reactionary violence by those opposed to central government's attempts at peaceful economic and land reform. The far more volatile terrorism is from the left.

This terrorism assumed a panicky, indiscriminate form when the government's land reform policies stripped the leftists of their cause celebre. The only option left to them was to try to shoot their way into power. ("First we will win the war, then we will win the people," said one guerrilla.)

For the time being, an all-out leftist offensive in El Salvador has been blunted. Mr. Reagan has promised military assistance for the shaky central government there. But much damage has been wrought already.

Again, the United States bears much of the blame. The United States, following its policy of non-support for "outmoded dictatorships," encouraged the coup d'etat in October, 1979, that brought a "moderate" military-civilian junta into power.

overestimated the ease with which authority, once undermined, can be restored. . . . [It] could not grasp the problem of governments which became the object of revolutionary violence."

It is no understatement that with Nicaragua under, El Salvador has become the watershed country of Central America. Should the tiny, densely populated nation fall to the radical left, the communist tide will be hard to stem. At stake are other Central American dominoes — Guatemala, Honduras, Belize, Costa Rica and Panama.

The relinquishing of U.S. sovereign control of the Panama Canal — now handing more ships than ever — looms as the most serious U.S. blunder of all in the spreading chaos in Central America.

The problem is, in Latin Ameri-

had the courage to push those fears aside, to translate caring into real action.

The third trait was the habit of helping. This was no isolated incident in the Samaritan's life. Through the years he had trained himself to respond affirmatively to other's needs. How? In the same way any of us can, but so much by heroic sacrifice, but by the endless repetition of small efforts.

By going the extra mile. By giving someone in trouble a hand — if you can. At work and in our neighborhood (dare I say even in our local church, maybe even in our own home?) are broken hearts and lives, people suffering from deep-felt needs. We rub shoulders with hurting, lonely people daily. Do we practice Zechariah 7:9-10.

Compassion — the word means "suffering with" — is lacking in all of us. Lack of real compassion is dangerous to our spiritual health.

When were you last "moved with compassion"? To find out if we lack compassion we might ask ourselves how we react when we hear that one of our friends or Christian brothers or sisters, young or old, is ill.

Is our attitude one of "so what," or are we moved with compassion to pray and even fast for that person's recovery? When we hear of others in need because of disaster or misfortune, do we say, "well they deserve it," God must be teaching them a lesson, or I don't have time to bother with their problems, I have problems of my own?

And what about our enemies? Do we have compassion on them and pray for them daily even though they continue to wrong us?

Remember, it was compassion that caused God to send Christ into our world. It was compassion that caused Christ to die for our sins. Significantly "bowels of mercies," or compassion, is the first of the "things that are above" that Paul tells us to seek (Colossians 3:1,12).

From compassion flows kindness, lowliness, meekness, patience, forgiveness. These virtues are various expressions of love, which bind everything in perfect harmony (verse 14).

Just one more thing

By Dexter H. Faulkner

Western civilization tends to encourage us to seek after material goods more than anything else. It is important to earn more money in order to acquire more property, a swimming pool, more clothes or a second car. These signs of wealth are a source of prestige.

Television commercials make us believe that there are all kinds of things we must have in order to be happy. This world's education and our whole environment compel us to acquire more things and prestige.

On the other hand, within our society are also those people who are struck by misfortune, tragically wounded by an accident or sickness, frustrated by lack of love, lonely or rejected.

And acting as a bridge between the two worlds are various charitable organizations: "Would you like to help build a home for the handicapped or in furthering cancer research?" "Would you like to contribute to this organization or that organization?" There are collections for the unfortunate around the world. Everywhere people are asking for funds for worthy causes.

Moved by persuasive speakers or perhaps by a bad conscience after seeing the misery of others on television, we in the Western world sit down on our comfortable couches and write out a check.

We give up some of our money so that others may have a little more. These forms of giving can be very worthwhile, but they can also be an escape.

A few years ago in Australia a friend and I visited a prospective member. The visit took us to the heart of the inner city. As we were entering the building we saw an elderly woman begging. We did not have any money with us.

My friend stooped in front of the woman, looked directly into her eyes and said, "I am sorry, but I do not have any money." But he said this with such tenderness that the eyes of the elderly woman lit up. For the first time someone had really looked at her, was concerned for her as a person. She looked gently and gratefully at my friend, for she had just experienced a moment of deep joy.

It is good to give money to those needy individuals we do not know, but not for the purpose of justifying failure to reach out to the wounded person close to us. It is far better to personally say by your gestures and facial expressions, "I am concerned about you."

Where does it come from, this capacity to share another's grief or feel another's pain? I remember hearing a sermon on that most famous of all compassion stories, the parable of the good Samaritan. What made the Samaritan respond when the other travelers who saw that crumpled figure on the road to Jericho simply walk by on the other side?

There were three character traits that made the good Samaritan the way he was, the minister pointed out. The first was empathy, the projection of one's own consciousness into another being. When the Samaritan saw the battered victim lying there, he didn't merely observe him, he became a part of him. This identification was so strong that when he went to help the man, he was helping part of himself.

The second was courage. Those who walked by were afraid, afraid of anything strange, afraid of getting involved, afraid that the robbers might come back. The Samaritan had the courage to push those fears aside, to translate caring into real action.

The third trait was the habit of helping. This was no isolated incident in the Samaritan's life. Through the years he had trained himself to respond affirmatively to other's needs. How? In the same way any of us can, but so much by heroic sacrifice, but by the endless repetition of small efforts.

International scope

It's so easy to forget that other countries . . . are so vastly different. But this paper helps to bring these differences to light and makes us really appreciate the varieties of human life and the unique individuality of each and every person in God's Church.

It also helps us to realize that our brethren around the world have many different hardships — some of which we in the United States have never before encountered. It is truly an inspiration to see our members combat and overcome each of their ordeals.

WITH STANLEY R. RADER

The following is excerpted from a Sept. 8, 1980, interview between Church treasurer Stanley R. Rader and John Siegenthaler of television station WDCN in Nashville, Tenn.

Hello, I'm John Siegenthaler, and this week on A Word on Words our guest is going to be Stanley Rader. Stanley Rader is a lawyer, an accountant, he's a minister, and he's been involved in one of the great struggles involving the First Amendment and the church.

His book, Against the Gates of Hell, is what we're going to be talking about this week on A Word on Words. Join us with Stanley Rader and Against the Gates of Hell.

Good evening ladies and gentlemen. Once again welcome to A Word on Words. This evening we are going to be talking about church freedom. We're going to be talking about the Constitution. We're going to be talking about a controversial religious fight that involves the Worldwide Church of God.

Herbert Armstrong is really the founder of this Church. And the man who is our guest tonight is Stanley Rader. I suppose it's fair to call you a protégé of Herbert Armstrong.

Yes, I think so. Your book, Against the Gates of Hell, tells about a brutal conflict between your Church and the state of California, the attorney general's office in California and your insistence that the efforts by the attorney general to take over that church was a violation of the First Amendment, which separates church and state.

Let me begin by asking you where you begin with the story. One morning a couple years back, you were in California, you decided to play tennis that morning instead of going to the office as you usually do.

And without notice a receiver appointed by the state of California moved in and tried to physically take over the assets of the Church, the books of the Church, the offices of the Church.

Actually, it was even more than that, of course. He arrived on the scene with armed guards, deputies from the sheriff's office, people from the attorney general's office, all carrying badges and guns.

They threatened our people with arrest if they didn't cooperate. They pointed a revolver at one pregnant woman and told her if she didn't do what they wanted her to do it would be very bad for her. She said, well, so shoot me.

And they simply came in and said things that they now wish they hadn't said. Remember, we are now almost 20 months later. But they said all the property of the Church belongs to the state of California anyway. Consequently, there was nothing for us to fight about.

They said that Mr. Armstrong, who although the modern leader of this Church at what we call its Philadelphia era, was no longer in charge. He had been removed by the state because all church officials, directors and employees work by leave of the will of the state.

And that I was no longer employed, and that the board of directors had been removed and that the Church was going to be changed from a hierarchical structure to something they thought would be better, to wit, a congregationalist system, because this is a democracy.

Now it has been brought on because some of the dissidents of the Church, some members who for a variety of reasons didn't like the way things were going on.

It's my perception they probably didn't like you, they saw you as maybe a manipulative agent. They thought, Mr. Armstrong is now in his 80s, he lives in Tucson, you are there on the scene, so they went and said a number of things.

One, that you and Mr. Armstrong were paying yourselves enormously. They said that you were draining off the resources of the Church, that you were selling the property of the Church and that the Church was really a charitable trust. And that's a legal term, and I don't know how deeply we want to get into that, probably a little later on we will have to address it.

But basically they said, if you are going to save our Church, if you are going to save its funds, its resources and its spiritual impetus, you are going to have to move in and take over now.

That isn't really what was said at all, but that is what the media perceived because of the way that the actual pleadings were handled.

Actually, six dissident, former members allowed their names to be used. Three never said anything, filed no affidavits whatsoever. The other three said only the following. One man who had never been employed said he had heard from somebody who in turn had heard that we were destroying our records.

His wife, who had never been employed or in any way had contact with the Work as a lay organization under Jesus Christ, said she was a real estate broker and had heard that we were selling off some properties below fair market value.

The third man had worked for a short time as a maintenance man. He said he knew that we were using expensive copper plumbing in our Auditorium and that we had recently purchased a chandelier for $7,500. He never mentioned the $250,000 chandelier in the Auditorium. That's all that was said by the dissidents.

But an attorney in the attorney general's office sat down and in an unverified complaint, meaning not

"They said . . . that the Church was going to be changed from a hierarchical structure to something they thought would be better . . . a congregationalist system."

subject to the penalties of perjury, and just citing other information and belief, not based upon any affidavits that he had, he said that Mr. Armstrong and I had pilfered and siphoned millions of dollars every year for our own benefit.

We were destroying our records to cover up our nefarious scheme. We were selling off properties at less than fair market value in furtherance of that scheme. And the cruncher was that we were about to sell a piece of property worth $30 million for $10 million.

We disproved all of the three last items in court six days later, disproved it even though we had no duty to prove it ourselves. And finally, the first charge the attorney general as recently as three weeks ago in an address to the assembly when he was fighting the Petris bill, said this has never been a question of theft.

Nobody has stolen anything. He said this is simply a question of whether or not I, as the attorney general representing the state of California, would agree with the way the funds of this Church had been spent. And I have the duty and the power and the right to supervise church activities, and to monitor them in the state of California.

Now, let me deal briefly with a matter that is personal, but one you have addressed very candidly in other forums and in the book.

Your salary plus fringe benefits amounted to $300,000 over the last couple of years. You did sell a home that the Church helped provide you at a profit, as I read it, of more than $1 million. If that's not correct, you correct me.

But, when I say that there may have been some Church members who objected to you and who saw you as sort of a manipulative agent moving Mr. Armstrong, who is elderly, you say, absolutely not.

How much did your own life-styles, your own income, your own, as they would say profiteering, have to do with this movement first of all by these six dissidents. How much did that have to do with what the attorney general ultimately did?

I don't think it had much to do with it at all. First of all, I had been a

And lo and behold, everyone has found out that I'm not too unpopular either. That doesn't necessarily work too well for my own personal benefit, but they found out that I wasn't as disliked as they thought.

Well, you tell of the turmoil that occurred when the receiver appointed by the court moved in, physically took over the property, powerfully took over the property, exercised physical force in some instances.

There was a countermovement by members of the Church who came one day, conducted a sit-in and kept the receiver for a period from coming in. Worked out a compromise, and when the compromise didn't work they pulled another sit-in. So you are right. There is no doubt that there is support for Herbert Armstrong and support for you among the members of the Church.

"He arrived on the scene with armed guards . . . They threatened our people with arrest if they didn't cooperate. They pointed a revolver at one pregnant woman and told her if she didn't do what they wanted her to do, it would be very bad for her. She said, well, so shoot me."

very high earner all of my life, and I had earned these sums prior to becoming a member of the Church. I have only been a member for five years. I have only been a member of the hierarchy for one year. I've only been an employee or an officer or a director of the Church for five years.

When I gave up all of my other activities, my legal practice, my accounting practice, any other activities that I had, at the suggestion of the Church and Mr. Armstrong, we sat down and we decided what would be necessary to provide me, in order to make that possible, just as though they were hiring somebody else off the street, but they wanted me.

And so my income was never a problem. What was a problem for some people was in 1975 I went from nonmember to member. That bothered some people.

Now you had been associated with the Church prior to that professionally. You'd been his adviser, his accountant, his counsel.

And I had about as much sway

Let me ask however, do Church members under this Constitution of ours, the First Amendment to the Constitution separating church and state, do Church members have no recourse at civil law.

I know what you say in the book about criminal penalties, but if members think that the Church is being mismanaged, if they have reason to believe that leaders are being, say, overpaid as some thought you were, or may have thought you were, is there no remedy in civil law?

There is a remedy. As a matter of fact, everyone clearly knows that there's a remedy and that's another way that the attorney general of our state tried to mislead the public, and the media and the courts.

The California legislature, as I mentioned, has just recently passed the bill stripping the attorney general of the very powers he has asserted over churches. Because they recognize that there were adequate remedies in all parts of the civil code of California and the criminal code to protect the public and anyone against any person who violates the criminal law, as well as to protect the members.

But, when you come into court seeking a civil remedy, you're going to have to be able to show that the things that were done were things different from what you had expected would be done, or contrary to what you knew was being done.

In other words, it's not going to be enough to come into court as a member and say, I came into the Church, I tithed $10,000 over a period of 10 years and I knew what Mr. Armstrong was doing in preaching the Gospel worldwide.

I knew about the fine buildings in Pasadena. I knew about the salaries, I knew about this and that, but now I've decided I don't like it anymore. This is not the true Church, I want my money back. No court would listen to that kind of argument.

In other words, you're going to have to prove your case. You're going to have to prove that you in some way unfairly were dealt with, and justifiably relied on things totally contrary to what you had expected.

That would never be the case in our Church, because we are one of the most open churches in the world. We report fully to our members weekly and monthly and also from the pulpit every Saturday, because we have an unbelievable churchgoing Church.

Furthermore, every person is supposed to prove all things before he comes into the Church. The average Church member takes at least three years before he comes into the Church.

He proves all things about the Bible to himself and proves all things about this Church before he comes in. Therefore, the chances of anyone really complaining about things in our Church is very slim.

The attorney general was clever, though. He knew that what was not true in our case was true elsewhere, that other people do not get information of that type, vis-a-vis the other churches.

He wasn't trying just to destroy us or bend us to his will. He was also trying to create a legal precedent for the proposition that he would be the person as self-designated religious arbiter for the state of California, so that all people who were dissatisfied with the way churches were being governed or the way churches were carrying on their activities, could be policed by the state. It was strictly a power play of state vs. church.

Well, the natural question that comes to mind is, why would a state attorney general want to do such a thing? You suggest three or four reasons in the book. One, this was just immediately after Jonestown, Guyana. The complaint came at about the time that was frightening everybody in this country.

You even suggested it might have been personal, that Mr. [Lawrence R.] Tapper [deputy attorney general] was in your law school class and you were high and he was low, in the bowels of the class, as someone said.

The Los Angeles [Calif.] Times used graphic language about the deputy attorney general who was in charge at the moment, having come from the bowels of the class, the same class I was No. 1 in. But that just gives a little personal interest and personal animus.

For years there had been a charitable trust division in the California attorney general's office, very aggressive, which had made repeated efforts, not too well disguised, to assert jurisdiction over churches. They had never been successful.

And then when the legislature passed a new bill, which became section 9230 of the nonprofit corporation code, immediately following that Jonestown incident, that seemed to them to be a signal from the legislature and maybe the courts, that churches were to fall within the domain of charitable trusts, and hence, the attorney general had the power. Now the Petris bill, Senate Bill 1493, just simply wipes away 9230.

What about his role of excommunication? I'm not sure that there are many people maybe outside the Roman Catholic discipline who really appreciate what that's all about. How can one be separated from God by the order of another?

The Bible makes it very plain that this is a major ultimate weapon the Church has to use in neutralizing people who would otherwise spread the seeds of discord.

You say, it's more than a suggestion, that Herbert Armstrong is the apostle of God, designated by God and that his successor, whether it's Stanley Rader or somebody else, is going to be picked by God. Now tell me the process by which that takes place.

Process, I would imagine if it were to ever take place . . .

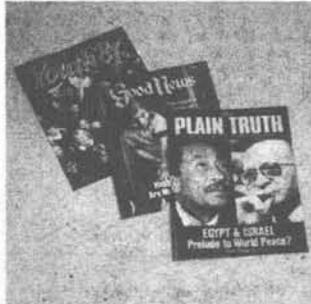

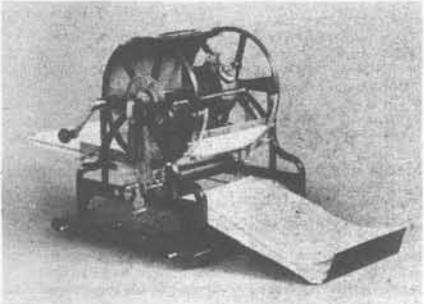

Well, he's going to die, we know this.

Yes, but we don't believe that we'll ever have to have such a process, because we believe firmly that he will be permitted by God, a living God, to complete the Work that God gave him to do. And that's the way God has always acted if you look throughout the Bible.

If for any chance we have in one (See FORUM, page 11)

Publishing staff pulls together to back Mr. Armstrong, Church

By Jeff Zhorne

PASADENA—An idea became reality in February, 1934, when Pastor General Herbert W. Armstrong hand-cranked a simple Neostyle press to publish The Plain Truth magazine. Since then the Work's Publishing Services Department has grown phenomenally with publications ranging from concert tickets to full-color magazines.

Now, about 80 technicians produce in one year a volume of literature, which, if placed end to end, would encircle the globe two times, according to Roger Lippross, production director.

These 80 artisans support Mr. Armstrong in carrying Christ's end-time message to the world by publishing the Work's magazines, booklets, the Correspondence Course and The Worldwide News.

Mr. Armstrong's books

In 1980, Publishing Services produced up-to-date versions of Mr. Armstrong's books, The Incredible Human Potential, A Voice Cries Out, The Wonderful World Tomorrow—What It Will Be Like, The Missing Dimension in Sex and The United States and Britain in Prophecy.

Publishing Services employees serve more than 70 departments in the Work. Last year they produced nearly 2.5 million booklets and 26 million magazines in five languages, according to Mr. Lippross.

Production control

From the time a manuscript prepared by the Editorial Services Department reaches Publishing, production control works closely with the customer and schedules all jobs, to ensure they are completed as required by the customer.

Layouts, pictures and copy for The Plain Truth are first priority. Other jobs are scheduled around the magazine.

Design graphics

From production control the manuscript moves into graphics and composing. The graphics departments make ideas come alive in creative designs, artwork and layouts. Plain Truth insert cards, booklets and other promotional material are designed according to Mr. Armstrong's time-tested advertising guidelines.

While most jobs are handled in the Ambassador Publishing complex, major publications like The Plain Truth and The Good News are designed and laid out by artists in Editorial Services.

Design graphics personnel also produce Mr. Armstrong's newspaper advertisements. "His ads in various editions of The Wall Street Journal reach up to two and three million readers in any given week," said Terry Warren, design graphics manager.

Composition

In the composing department the manuscript and original layout are turned into print.

Using sophisticated, high-speed computers, composing provides customers with complete typesetting, proofreading and art services. Composing room operators type copy on video display terminals with television-type screens. Other operators work in Editorial Services typesetting The Plain Truth and The Good News using on-line computer terminals.

"The computerized typesetting system outputs type at the rate of approximately 1,200 words per minute," said Jim Church, composition and systems manager.

The multifaceted computer can store more than 160 million characters in English, Spanish, French, German, Dutch, Portuguese, Danish and Afrikaans," he continued. "The feasibility of using satellite transmission is currently being studied," said Don Patrick, supervisor of composition and systems. "By satellite our overseas offices could transmit manuscripts at almost 1,000 characters per second."

The original manuscript, now in page form, is one step closer to the mailbox. Next comes film negatives and color separations by outside printers.

Prepress

From a color photograph, four negatives are produced to represent the four colors of printing—yellow, red, blue and black. Presses then print each color on top of the other to re-create the original panorama of color in the photograph.

When negatives reach the Work's film assembly department, they are arranged into the particular format required for platemaking and later printing.

Film assemblers must be accurate to within one one-thousandth of an inch, or the microscopic dot patterns will be blurred or low quality.

Mr. Paige visited Jerusalem during the recent winter break to make arrangements for participation in the "dig" this summer.

The 25 students are: John Andrews, Renae Bechthold, Sandi Borax, Kathy Brunz, Bob Caudle, Gary Childers, Bruce Dague, Peter Eddington, Wade Franson, Ruel Guerrero, Phil Hopwood, Sue Kopy, Maria Kosior, Mike McAllister, David Mosby, Sylvia Owen, Cheryl Pierson, Jacky Ramsey, Lisa

Ransdell, Mike Rasmussen, David Strong, Kathy Taylor, Peggy Warkentin, Terry Wiclawski and Greg Williams.

STUDENTS TAKE PART IN MPC COURSE

The Mail Processing Center instituted a student training program this semester, according to department director Richard Rice. Nine seniors are involved in the pilot program, which will be offered as a college credit course next school year, if approved by Chancellor Herbert W. Armstrong.

Mr. Rice said that in the past many students worked in the Mail Processing area, gaining valuable training in Personal Correspondence, Wide Area Telephone Service (WATS) lines and Terminal Operations.

Clarence Huse, director of Personal Correspondence, will oversee the program, and the students will be instructed by him. Mr. Rice and the respective department heads. Participants in the program, who are employed up to 20 hours a week are: James Capo, John Curry, Marty Davey, Steve Elliot, Rob Gordon, John Knaack, Steve LeBlanc, Dennis Milner and Gary Shaffer.

SINGLE SENIOR CITIZENS EVENING

Fifty-two widowers and widows in the Pasadena area were wined, dined and entertained at a Single Senior Citizens Evening Jan. 18, put on by Ambassador College Outreach.

The theme of the evening was "Le Cafe International," featuring French cuisine served by students in the faculty dining room from the various Outreach divisions. Evangelist Dibr Apartian of the French Department spoke on age, a "mind over matter" situation.

Dinner was followed by entertainment in the Fine Arts Recital Hall, where students performed international songs, dances and drama. A reception followed, for the guests to meet the entertainers and servers.

Outreach director Barry Dixon was pleased with the project. "We could tell from the beaming faces of our guests that it was a true success, and that God blessed the entire evening," he said.

Outreach is an all-Ambassador student volunteer organization that provides entertainment, visiting and service projects in the Church and community.

at a forum Jan. 27. This was the amount earned by students selling concessions at the Rose Bowl football game Jan. 1, and at Victory Park the following day where Rose Parade floats were viewed. An additional $5,322 was raised selling programs at the Rose Parade.

Mr. Plakut said the money will pay for many student body activities. Students participated in a department store inventory Jan. 13 and earned $1,600. The money was put into a fund to provide spending money for Ambassador students involved in the Ambassador College Educational Project in Thailand (ACEPT).

On Jan. 25, $4,000 was raised for the student body when 150 students answered phones during a UNICEF (United Nations International Children's Emergency Fund) telethon.

Student Body President Gary Shaffer explained that the student body was taking advantage of every opportunity to build up the student fund, because the next two Rose Bowl games will conflict with the Sabbath.

A Voice Cries Out: WHY The American Living Standard Is Going Down!

We are in or close to world chaos!
One factor is the rise and fall of the American standard of living. Why?

IT'S TIME we awaken to CAUSES! Human survival has become the world's
No. 1 problem.

What brought the world to this frightening brink of human extinction? What brought on the myriad problems, upheavals and evils that engulf
the world? And, paradoxically, amid awesome progress?

It's easy to become so engrossed in the day-to-day activities that we overlook underlying impending disasters. It's no time to fiddle while America and the world are burning!

Look now to one serious contributing factor—the 20th-century rise and now impending fall of the American standard of living. No nation ever ascended to the high living standard this nation has enjoyed!

But why? How did we come by it? What have we done with it? What basic CAUSES threaten to bring us low now?

There was an unrealized, underlying reason for America's rise to unprecedented wealth and affluence. But let me now mention

IT'S TIME we awaken to CAUSES! Human survival has become the world's No. 1 problem.

But why? How did we come by it? What have we done with it? What basic CAUSES threaten to bring us low now?

There was an unrealized, underlying reason for America's rise to unprecedented wealth and affluence. But let me now mention a specific subsidiary cause.

On Jan. 6, 1914, I was sent as an editorial representative of a national magazine to Detroit to interview Henry Ford about his sensational $5-a-day wage scale announced the day before. I saw Mr. Ford at the then Highland Avenue plant. But for details I also saw John R. Lee, head of the Sociological Department. It had been Mr. Lee's brainchild and he administered it.

"I understand," I began, "you are now paying the highest wage scale in the automobile industry."

"On the contrary," came the surprising reply, "we are paying the lowest."

Astonished, I asked, "Are you not now paying $5 per day for an eight-hour day, while the union scale at other plants is $3.75 for a nine-hour day?"

"Correct," Mr. Lee replied, "but we don't evaluate what we pay in terms of dollars per man-hour, but what we get for what we pay."

Then he explained that Ford alone had production large enough to shift to the assembly-line system. This enabled the company to set the pace of worker production.

Mr. Lee continued: "We now get more than twice the production per eight-hour day than others per nine-hour day. We pay $5 labor cost for the same production others receive for $7 labor cost—and our employees make $1.25 more per day for one hour less work."

The Ford company was then non-union, but later became unionized. It was not many years until others in the motorcar industry were able to go on the assembly-line system. Soon it became the system in most U.S. industry—all lines.

This nation provided a mass market for mass machine production not then possible in Europe and Japan.

This mass machine production soared industrial profits. But labor leaders were not going to allow capital and management to reap all the luscious benefits. Labor wars ensued. No longer was a single industry a united team of employer and employee. Of course capital and management was out to "GET" all it could by expanded profits from mass machine production. But labor, too, was out to "GET" all it could.

The "GET" incentive led to competition—too often to strife and violence—between the two divisions of the same company or industry.

It is enormously significant that in those years American mass production enjoyed lower actual production costs because of mass machine production. Other nations could not compete. With labor getting its full share of the enlarged prosperity pie, THE AMERICAN STANDARD OF LIVING SOARED TO A HIGH NEVER ATTAINED BY ANY PEOPLE IN WORLD HISTORY! A huge middle and upper-middle class emerged in the United States.

But Europeans, in due time, provided for themselves a mass market by the European Economic Community, the "Common Market." Soon Europe was competing in mass production by the assembly-line system—but with low-cost labor. Postwar Japan followed suit. America now faced a new international competition—European and Japanese assembly-line mass machine production with low-cost labor, against U.S. production with high-cost labor.

Abraham Lincoln knew, and said, we Americans did not come to our unprecedented prosperity and affluence of our own efforts. The Great God bestowed it on us—and is holding us ACCOUNTABLE! We have not used this unearned material birthright according to God's basic spiritual LAW of LOVE ("GIVE"). IT IS NOW BEING TAKEN FROM US!

It's time we WAKE UP—and THINK! This is no impractical or superstitious maudlin religious statement. It is the hard cold facts that stare us in the face!

We are going to be made to pay for our transgressions of the basic spiritual LAW of life set in just as relentless motion as the power of gravity!

Then, not because we deserve it, that super strong "Unseen Hand from Someplace" is going to intervene, and save this beloved country—and the world—from ourselves! It will not be done by us, but to us—ushering in the utopian WORLD TOMORROW—world peace, happiness, universal well-being, eternal salvation for all who will!

The time has come! A voice cries out! You have been told! Your acceptance or rejection will not alter what is about to happen!

 ippines, where the staff distributes issues to members there.

Members in isolated areas are not neglected either, according to Ron Urwiller of the International Mail Department. His office is responsible for mailing bulk copies to the Caribbean and South America, where they are either handed out in services or mailed individually. The International Mail Department also sends copies to brethren in India and Sri Lanka, which the brethren receive in services. This same procedure is followed in East and West Africa, except where members are unable to travel to services. These individuals receive copies through the mail, he said.

The International Mail Department also sends bulk copies of The Worldwide News to the students participating in the Ambassador College Educational Project in Thailand (ACEPT).

Non-English-speaking brethren are serviced in part by the Spanish-language El Comunicado and the German-language Die Gute Nachricht (The Good News). These publications, produced by the Work's Spanish and German departments, carry articles published in the English Good News, as well as articles from The Worldwide News from time to time, according to Rod Matthews.

In closing

Included in Jennifer's letter was a poem about God's Kingdom. Since her request precipitated this article, we are reprinting it here.

Thy Kingdom come
 I hope the Kingdom comes soon;
 On one sunny afternoon.
 My mother and father always say,
 "Just wait — it will be here some day."
 It will be such a sight;
 No more hate — no more night.
 And it will be beautiful throughout the land;
 With the help of God's great Hand.

Publishing

By use of a magnifying glass the dots in a color photo in The Plain Truth can be easily seen.

Rather than print individually designed foreign editions of the magazines, film assembly personnel use the same color negatives with only a text change to make foreign language translations.

Printers

The film is then shipped to printers in Glasgow, Ky.; St. Albans, England; Auckland, New Zealand; Singapore; and South Africa.

"We no longer print our major magazines, booklets or full-color work in-house," noted Mr. Lippross. "The work is divided among 25 of America's best printers, like R.R. Donnelley, because they can buy paper in larger quantities at considerable savings."

In-house machines print and bind letters, reply cards, stationery, concert tickets and business forms because short runs can take as little as 10 hours instead of the four days usually required by commercial printers.

The departments comprising Publishing Services work together to streamline costs, yet provide customers with high quality.

With the original manuscript now transformed into an attractive publication, the next phase is circulation. But that will be another article explaining how Christ's printed message is distributed.

ONLY TOMORROW

Only tomorrow my son will this heartache be erased.
You left us that horrible day
Your life was stilled
Our world stopped!
The unbelievable horror
The shock, numbness
Questions without answers.
Why were you — a jewel shining brightly — allowed to die?
So much love you gave so much joy.
Our hearts warmed at your sight.
Our day better because of your presence.
What does your death mean, my son?
What should we learn?
It can't be! we cried
not our child!
A mistake!
Dear God, it can't be!
He's so still,
so very still.
Oh God, our hearts ache.
Comfort us now
Not more than we can bear, you said.
Help us to pray,
to remain steadfast and strong.
Help us to cherish our memories to remember the truth you've shown.
Life! What is it?
Appareth for a little while then vanisheth away.
God shall call and you will answer, my son!
To live is Christ and to die is gain.
While you sleep, dear son, we wait
we remember — the backpacking, hunting, floating the river
the picnics, barbecues, the homemade ice cream that you made so well.

The loving teasing with your brother, inseparable, the two of you were!
The protectiveness toward your sister.
How you would have loved the child you never knew she was carrying.
Oh God! Why is he gone?
We love him so!
You grew so big and strong
Six feet two you stood, shoulders wide as a door
Blond hair glistening in the sun.
Blue eyes dancing with delight
A smile that brightened any room
Your heart big as all outdoors.
Your father's eyes are so sad, my son.
He loves you so.
Loved working with you day by day loved the gentle harassment of a father and son.
We've grown old, Bobby
We hurt so badly.
You are everywhere with us.
Every car we hear is yours coming home.
We wait for you to come down to dinner.
Your laughter ripples through the house.
You smile at us from your pictures.
You touch us from the things you made
You inspire us with the things you wrote.
Twenty short years we had you with us.
It won't be long now, my son.
Oh, how we long for that day —
"Thy Kingdom come" — we pray!
We want to be there to see you smile again —
to hold you in our arms again.
Goodbye — sleep well, it is —
Only tomorrow — dear son — only tomorrow!

way or another misconstrued that Great Commission so that Mr. Armstrong would not be able to fulfill it himself, God would then show us who that person would be.

But your question was a good one. It's a fair one. I've been asked it again and again. I've been unable to put that matter to rest, and no matter how hard I tell people it will not be me, it seems that people still would like to make it as such, that I could be considered as a possibility.

I am actually going to be making an announcement very soon, which I've already made in several churches around the country. I spoke just recently in the Carolinas. I spoke this week in Miami [Fla.], where I'm making it very plain that as soon as this lawsuit is completed and as soon as we have been totally vindicated, and the attorney general is on his knees fearing the living God, I will return to private practice.

And if for any reason at all Mr. Armstrong should be unable to continue with the Great Commission prior to that time, I will even earlier return to private practice and con-television and radio, to spread the word and raise money.

You point out in the book that the Worldwide Church does not do that.

And finally, let me deal with the question of those who would use the word, the gospel, for political or social aims. Would you address how those in the society first of all, who pay taxes and don't like it because churches are absolved from paying taxes, how they can protect themselves or defend themselves from that, or is that really a price we pay for First Amendment freedoms?

Those are all very important issues. First of all, you're quite right, we do not raise money by use of radio, television or the printed word. Others do and I feel it's their right to do so, and I do believe in that sense it's one of the prices that we pay. We also, however, do not proselytize; others do. Again I feel that is a price we must pay for the First Amendment.

I feel that the matter of being free from taxes is much misunderstood, because no society has ever taxed anything but the source that earns the money.

We don't earn any money, we receive contributions. If we did earn money from unrelated business income it would be taxable; we do not. We are free from property

We, on the other hand, again others do not, we're not saying they should, we are the second largest property taxpayer in Pasadena, Calif. Because Mr. Armstrong felt our Church should be the best kind of citizen and because we had the wherewithal, we should pay something voluntarily and not elect to be totally exempt. But again, the other churches have a right not to do it that way and perhaps they cannot afford it.

The bottom line, though, of all of this is really what you are concerned about and I am, too, as a person who is not only a lawyer but a law professor, and I hope to return to both professions. What is the proper role of government in this area? Who will rule the churches, Christ or Caesar, is another way of saying it.

I feel the last bastion in the private sector that has heretofore remained free from government interference and the bureaucrats and the so-called secular humanistic approach to life has been the area of the churches, because it's been protected by the First Amendment.

Take down that wall, and we will have the bureaucrats and the politicians running all of our lives. And then we'll have the kind of problem that we had prior to the time we had our Constitution.

And I feel this movement from

"And if for any reason at all Mr. Armstrong should be unable to continue with the Great Commission . . . I am not qualified to be a successor, I do not believe that I should be, I do not have any desire for it, and I will leave that problem for others."

tinue the fight outside the hierarchy.

I am not qualified to be a successor, I do not believe that I should be, I do not have any desire for it, and I will leave that problem for others.

Let me touch, in the three or four minutes that we have left, on Guyana as one set of circumstances, and then separate that and deal with the so-called electronic gospel by which many ministers now use the media, taxes, but the Supreme Court has said the reason for that is the First Amendment, not to give a benefit.

Because to involve the government in the process of, shall we say, assessing the tax rates and collecting the money, maybe having to confiscate the property for failure to pay, would unnecessarily intrude the government into the affairs of the church. That would violate the First Amendment.

the Moral Majority and others of that sort, is a danger that may bring that about sooner. Because I don't believe that there should be church activity in the partisan political process. We avoid it and we tell our members to stay out of that.

We do, however, get involved in teaching on social issues, but never in such a way as to have that construed as any part of the political process.

New Zealanders escape injury when car crashes through fence

AUCKLAND, New Zealand — The days of miracles have not passed, according to Pat Richards, a Church member here. Together with her husband George and their 2-year-old granddaughter, the Richards were divinely protected in a traffic accident when traveling from Auckland to Christchurch for last year's Feast.

Traveling at night, Mr. Richards missed a turnoff. He continued along a strange road until he reached a marked intersection and continued toward Christchurch. "From then on strange things began to happen, which looking in retrospect, you have the feeling that events just didn't happen," wrote Mrs. Richards.

As Mr. Richards approached a curve on a hill, he tried to turn the steering wheel, but it would not respond. The car remained on a straight course.

"We both knew what was going to happen, as we could see the fence looming up in front of us," continued Mrs. Richards. "George quietly said, 'Oh God, save us,' as we crashed through the fence."

The car careened down the hill, went through a second fence and between two posts with only inches to spare on each side. Instead of rolling over, the Richards felt the car turn 60 degrees and continue down the 80-foot incline.

Instead of gaining speed, the car slowed down, she said. It came to a stop with the front of the car in a creek inclined at a 45-degree angle. In their path, 3 feet away, was a large tree.

None of the passengers suffered injury, and the car sustained only minor damage. The Richards continued their journey the next day as planned, after the car was pulled out and received minor repairs.

Showers bring drought relief

By Roger Rye
NEWCASTLE, Australia — After a prolonged period of drought, rain came Jan. 2, bringing partial relief to Newcastle Church members' homes and farms.

Del Richards, a member owning property in the Hunter Valley, was thankful for the four inches of rain in 48 hours.

His dams dry and pastures dust-blown, Mr. Richards had asked Newcastle pastor Gary Harvey and the brethren to pray for rain. Within three days, torrents covered most of Hunter Valley, one of Australia's richest agricultural areas. Some rain also fell near Narrabri and Tamworth, where other farmers were suffering.

Despite the rainfall, drought still continues regionwide. Last growing season, farmers lost thousands of acres of wheat. Many couldn't meet milk quotas.

An Australian newspaper reported last April that scarcely a blade of green grass could be seen outside irrigated areas from the Indian Ocean to the Pacific.

According to the article, 1980 began Western Australia's third year of drought. Three years ago, Queensland Premier Johannes Bjelke-Petersen set aside Jan. 15 as a day of prayer for rain.

Although Newcastle water supplies were partly replenished by the rain, water restrictions in force this past summer were increased.

Homeowners can water their gardens for only eight hours a week. Newcastle's largest supply of drinking water, Grahamstown Lake, increased 1 percent because of the showers.

Campers develop skills at SEP in South Africa

By Bob Klynsmith
ESTCOURT, South Africa — Overlooking a massive dam, surrounded by rugged hills and mountains, Wagon Drift Resort set the scene for the South African Summer Educational Program (SEP) here beginning Dec. 16.

More than 100 young people participated in the two-week event that included rock climbing, canoeing, orienteering, wind surfing, waterskiing, basketball, softball, soccer and dancing, according to SEP director John Bartholomew.

An obstacle course presented a major challenge. In groups of eight, campers had to devise quick, effective methods of overcoming various obstacles. The activity was designed to test physical and mental resources such as initiative, problem solving, leadership, team spirit and endurance.

On an overnight camping trip, the youths set up tents and built fires in the wilderness.

Campers hiked the Drakensberg range and climbed steep 10,000-foot peaks.

On the final evening young people gathered around a camp fire for a final sing-along.

NEWS OF PEOPLE, PLACES & EVENTS IN THE WORLDWIDE CHURCH OF GOD

CHIANG KHONG, Thailand — Members of the Ambassador College Educational Project in Thailand (ACEPT) met Queen Sirikit of Thailand when she made a surprise visit to the Ban Thong refugee camp Jan. 4, according to Gladys Whyte of ACEPT.

Mrs. Whyte said she and other members of the ACEPT staff participated as honor guards during the queen's visit. She said the queen spoke with staff members and learned that ACEPT originated at Ambassador College.

Some staff members spoke briefly with the queen when she departed later in the day, she said.

Mrs. Whyte is a 1980 graduate of the Ambassador College Biblical Studies program.

UTRECHT, Netherlands —

January saw more increases in mail and mail income for God's Work in Dutch-speaking areas, according to Abraham "Bram" de Bree, regional director of the office here.

Total mail set new records, with January showing a 60 percent increase over the record-breaking year of 1980. Records show that mail income increased 64 percent, and church attendance rose 26 percent. Mr. de Bree noted that the Dutch-language church in Europe grew 12 percent since January, 1979.

Commenting that the mail activity was "a very good way to start the year," Mr. de Bree reported that nearly 6,000 pieces of literature were mailed during the month, including Dutch-language copies of Pastor General Herbert W. Armstrong's book, The Incredible Human Potential.

WASHINGTON — More than 500 representatives gathered here Feb. 17 and 18 from Roman Catholic, Protestant, Eastern Orthodox and Jewish bodies to "plan strategy against what they termed government incursions into religious affairs," according to an Associated Press (AP) wire service report.

Religion editor Russell Chandler of the Los Angeles, Calif., Times quoted conference chairman William P. Thompson (an attorney and executive officer of the United Presbyterian Church) as stating, "We must make it clear that we will not stand mute and let secular forces pick us off one by one."

The AP account reported that about 90 percent of organized religion in America was represented, along with about 300 legal and religious experts in church-state relations and constitutional law.

Included in these were Harvard law professor Laurence H. Tribe, who said that religious "autonomy is at the core of the Constitution." Dean Kelley of the National Council of Churches was also present.

Charles M. Wheland, a Jesuit priest and law professor at New York's Fordham University, discussed the Worldwide Church of God's defense against the California attorney general. Noting that the attorney general had dropped the case, he stated that charitable trust laws "can be [a] sword as well as [a] shield."

He also pointed out that the California attorney general and the low-

Chairman Thompson said that government intervention into religion is "alarming."

INTERNATIONAL DESK

BY ROD MATTHEWS

PASADENA — With 1980 behind us, many of the international offices have summarized their activities and the accomplishments God has given them.

From Britain

The Radlett Office reports that advertisements were placed in two million continental newspapers and magazines. Seven million newspapers in Scandinavia and 59 million in the United Kingdom and Ireland.

This brought 52,000 requests for The Plain Truth. Another 11,500 came from English-speaking people in Europe and the Middle East as a result of mail advertisements.

The Plain Truth was advertised by display boards and dispensers at 24 exhibition sites throughout the United Kingdom. More than 800,000 leaflets and 100,000 sample copies of The Plain Truth were distributed using this medium.

Circulation figures at the end of December (with percentage change from December, 1979) were:

United Kingdom and Ireland, 68,250, up 86 percent; Scandinavia, 13,700, up 156 percent; Middle East, 4,160, up 169 percent; East and West Africa, 18,760, down 9 percent; and Europe (English), 15,000, up 73 percent.

Income for 1980 was up 30 percent over 1979.

Philippines

The year ended with nearly 96,000 pieces of mail having been received — up 17 percent over 1979.

Plain Truth magazine subscriptions have risen steadily, at a rate of 2,000 a month, to 44,500. Another 5,500 are put on newsstands.

Responses to advertisements went up 376 percent in 1980, largely because of 4,366 requests for the booklet Does God Exist? as advertised in Panorama magazine in August.

Over the years, nearly 15,000 students have completed 12 lessons of the Correspondence Course. Another 3,180 are active students.

Baptized members reached 2,165 (up 2.6 percent over 1979) and 157 new prospective members were added in 1980 (up 54 percent).

New Zealand

Last year was an exciting and inspiring one for God's Work in this part of the world. Attendance at Sabbath services passed the 1,000 mark for the first time late in the year.

Since January, 1979, income has run at about a 30 percent increase every month, with the year-end increase at 27.4 percent.

Nearly 82,000 letters were received in 1980, 80 percent of these coming from New Zealand and the rest from other Pacific Islands. Mail from New Zealand was about the same as last year's total, but Pacific Islands mail was 55 percent higher than 1979, mainly because we opened post office boxes in Fiji and Tonga.

Major Plain Truth promotions brought in 18,000 new subscribers. More than 6,000 requests came in for Tomorrow — What It Will Be Like and The United States and Britain in Prophecy, offered to Plain Truth subscribers.

Toward the end of the year three ministers were transferred to Australia, including Bob Morton, who had been the regional director of God's Work in New Zealand since December, 1975. Peter Nathan arrived in October to replace him, and Lyall Johnston, a native New Zealander, and Don Engle moved from the United States.

Evangelist Gerald Waterhouse's visit in October was a high point of the year for God's people there, and a most successful Summer Educational Program camp in December brought the year to a splendid close.

Cameroon

Roy Clare is continuing his adventurous life in Cameroon. In his letter of Dec. 18, he wrote: "Last Sabbath, we went to preach to the brethren in Makak and Libamba. About 22 persons (children included) were present. Apparently, several from Minka couldn't come because of no transportation. I made two trips (6 kilometers) from Libamba to Makak to pick up several who couldn't find a taxi."

"I distributed Mr. Armstrong's book on human potential, and left two Bible dictionaries and concordances with the deacons, as well as two issues of the WN from the 10th and 24th of November."

"The film about China and the one of the Young Ambassadors were shown to the brethren of Edea, one week earlier. The brethren were profoundly touched and very enthusiastic to see Mr. Armstrong in action."

"They were equally thrilled to see the Young Ambassadors film, during which several were so happy they sprang up and began to dance. These films certainly had a good impact on the brethren here."

Escape

Two months ago, Bobby Teh, a member in Malaysia, escaped death when a construction van in which he was traveling went off the road into a ravine. The van was full of pipes and construction material, any of which could have injured the occupants.

Instead of plunging down head-first, the van "slowly went down, as if supported by parachute, and landed on its wheels," local minister Yong Chin Gee reported to the church in Kuala Lumpur.

Bobby Teh and the driver were badly shaken and bruised, but suffered only a few minor cuts. Bobby Teh managed to throw a rope from the equipment up to a startled motorist who stopped to inspect the wreck. The man then pulled them up. An ambulance happened to be passing, and they were taken to a hospital for examination. Bobby Teh doesn't remember how he had the strength to throw the rope.
